side for a closer look. She emerges on the double with a bit of fluff in her bill.
 "See this? Squirrels. If they can get into this house, we'll never be safe."
 Papa sadly agrees and flits farther afield.
 "Now we've got it," he pants breathlessly as he drops beside Mamma on a branch and rests his wings. "It's such a treasure, I've already moved in some bedding to stake out a claim."

Westmoreland Crowns Its May Queen

Cool clear weather graced Westmoreland's annual May-Day exercises on Friday, when Barbara Balut was crowned Queen of the May. Barbara was elected by popular vote of the senior high school, her identity jealously guarded until the moment before formation of the procession and beginning of the annual pageant. Barbara is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Balut, Pioneer Avenue, Shavertown. Her sister Ramona was May Queen last year.

without my say-so? I like your nerve. Everything will be wrong. How do you know what kind of sheets I like best?"
 Mamma flounces off, Papa urging her in the right direction.
 Good location, nice clean house, right elevation from the ground, no squirrel debris. Southern exposure, no overhanging branches.
 But that bedding!
 It will never do. "Think I want all those great hunks of stick in here? What we need is something soft. The house will do if we can't find anything better, but those sticks will have to go."

 Mamma maneuvers each stick through the doorway and gives it a parting kick. She shovels out the last of the furnishings while Papa perspires gently in the background and hopes for more settled times.
 Then she begins to furnish the apartment again with the selfsame sticks and litter. Papa knows enough not to interfere. "Let her work herself crazy," is his inner thought, "and maybe we'll have a little peace around here."
 Mamma eases herself through the front door, pinning roses on herself. "Nothing like a woman's touch," she warbles, "to make a house a home."

"A can-opener is a device which permits a housewife to move around in the best circles."

Giants To Have Training School

The New York Giants will hold a baseball school and tryout camp at Artillery Park—the home of the Wilkes-Barre Barons—on June 15, 16, and 17. Any youngsters between the ages of 17 to 25 are eligible to attend.
 The tryout camp will be under the director of New York Giants scouts—Nick Shinkoff and Frank (Skeeter) Scalzi. Shinkoff is in charge of the Giants scouting system for the Eastern seaboard. Scalzi formerly played in the major leagues with the Giants and has managed for a number of years in the minors. He was headman at Sunbury and Richmond, Va. among other clubs.
 Further inquiries about the tryout camp may be directed to the office of the Wilkes-Barre Barons, Artillery Park, Kingston.
