Coon Hound Cemetery W. J. Harris, a game biologist for the Tennessee State Game

Fish Commission, recently visited and reported on what he believes may be the only "coon hound graveyard" in the United

This unusual cemetery is lo-cated in the Colbert County Game Refuge in Alabama. It is evident that in this particular region of Alabama coon hunting is taken seriously and good coon hounds are treated almost like members of the family. The sportsmen believe in honoring their favorite dogs even after the animals have passed to whatever reward may be awaiting them in "dog heaven."

Originated and maintained by Tennessee Valley Coon Hunters Association, the neat cemetery holds the graves of some 15 hounds. A number of the graves are marked with chiseled sandstone slabs bearing such unique epitaphs as "Roe buck, died in a death-to-death fight with a huge bobcat," and "Major, one of the best."

SIGNS OF WORMS

Although you cannot tell which one, two or three kinds worms are infesting your pet, you can usually tell when he has worms of some kind. You can almost be sure when you see signs of worms in his drop-pings or on the hairs of his legs, or if your puppy is pot-bellied Abnormal or ravenous appetite, twitching while asleep, watery eyes, foul breath, diarrhea, unusually offensive feces, constipation, dragging anus on ground, unkempt and unthrifty appearnce-those, too, are signs of worms. Because puppies are so sure to have worms and to become reinfested, you should worm a puppy when weaned, 30 days afterwards, each 60 days thereafter if he shows signs of worms, for the first year. After a puppy is one year old, worm once every year. No puppy should be wormed until weaned; no sick or ailing dog until worming has

FREE BOOK AT EVANS ON CARE OF YOUR PUPPY

JUST WHAT is the specific in-ormation on puppy raising that s most desired by the average, inexperienced puppy owner? Most authorities on dogs do not know; the more of an authority one becomes, the less he recalls just what he wished he knew when he raised his first puppy To find out the information of greatest service to those raising puppies for the first time, a 12month test was made—not on puppies—but on puppy owners! To make this test, some o the cutest, cuddliest little pup-pies in the world were given to people willing to cooperate These co-operators were visited before they received their pup-pies to learn what they knew and didn't know about puppies; they were visited frequently afterwards to determine the information they needed.

From our preliminary talks with these co-operators, supplemented by similar talks with other prospective puppy owners puppy and his owner would be better off if the latter knew certain facts about puppies before his pet arrived.
