Here's How To Protect Children From Discarded Old Refrigerators

How to let air in or keep children out of discarded iceboxes is the sub- ject of a recent publication by the National Safety Council.

The publication is being dis- tributed to schools, and a stepped-up information campaign is under way to warn parents of the greater danger during the summer months.

Citing an unofficial count of 79 child deaths in the last five years, the Council details several methods for preventing suffocation in ice- boxes, refrigerators, freezers and other airtight cabinets.

A worn-out refrigerator should be disposed of to a junk dealer, but if that can't be done immediately, then—

1. Remove the door. This is the safest way, since a chest especially may have a door or lid so heavy that a child could not open it even if unlatched.

2. Remove the latch stop. This usually can be done easily by re- moving the screws from the plate.

3. Drill rows of holes in the cab- inet sides and pry off the rubber gasket around the door. These methods, used together, will reduce the danger of suffocation in a re- frigerator kept in use as a storage cabinet.

If refrigerators are temporarily out of use while the owners wait to move them to another location, sell them or pass them on to relatives, then—

1. Remove the latch stop, which can be easily replaced.

2. Turn the box with the door against the wall. Most boxes are too heavy for children to move.

3. Bind the door shut with wire or stout rope.

4. Padlock the door when the handle is so constructed.

The Council points out that the hazard apparently is increasing as more and more outmoded refrigera- tors are being replaced. Twice as many deaths occurred in 1953 as in 1952. The average age of victims is five years, with the range from two to 12.

While urging legislation to impose penalties for careless disposal of airtight cabinets, the Council be- lieves that only informed adults can give positive protection to youngsters.

Rev. Ira Button will conduct serv- ices.
