

Television Sets On 4 Of 10 Farms

95 Per Cent Of
Farms Have Electricity

Four out of every 10 farms in Pennsylvania have television sets, according to the "Pennsylvania Crop and Livestock Report," published by the State Department of Agriculture.

It was compiled by the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service with the cooperation of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

From survey estimates made as of February 1 of this year the publication declared 39 per cent of the 146,887 farms in Pennsylvania have television sets, or approximately 57,000 farms.

In addition, 95 per cent of all Pennsylvania farms now have electricity, 69 per cent have telephones, 83 per cent have running water, 64 per cent have bath rooms and 57 per cent have heating systems.

The main part of this annual report of 40 pages contains pertinent data by counties and for the State on all major crops, livestock, poultry, eggs, milk, number of farms and data at the State level on rank among other states, farm cash income, prices received and paid by farmers, farm wage rates, use of fertilizer and lime, farm machinery and equipment, and conveniences on farms.

According to D. O. Boster, agricultural statisticians in charge of the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service, the report includes data designed to show areas of production, quantities produced, value of production, prices and other related subject matter on selected commodities.

He expressed appreciation to the thousands of voluntary crop and livestock reporters throughout the State, business firms, processors, State and Federal agencies, and other handlers of agricultural products for supplying the basic information required for publication of the report.

YOUR HEALTH

Medical Society
State of Pennsylvania

Ida Lupino, Judy Holliday and Kitty Carlisle, actresses, have all been victims of polio—now recovered.

What this country needs are handrails around the house.

More people die from falls mostly in and about the home than from any other cause except automobile accidents.

Accidental falls cause death at every period of life although the highest death rates by far are recorded at the older ages.

A total of about 21,000 persons are killed every year in accidental falls.

While two-thirds of all fatal falls occur in and about the home, the balance takes place in public buildings and on streets and highways.

Comparatively few deaths from falls occur in factories, workshops, mines and quarries, largely due to intensive safety programs instituted in recent years.

The type of falls causing death changes from one age period to another.

Among preschool children, falls out of windows and from porches are the common type of falls.

Falling from roofs, swings, trees, and fences causes more deaths among the school-age children.

Death from falls on stairs and steps, while at a minimum under the age of 25, increases with advanced age.

Many falls in the home are due to objects left lying about, slippery surfaces, worn or loose floor coverings, and dark, cluttered hallways.

Among the elderly, many falls occur while merely walking about, due usually to physical weakness and impairment.

Icy, greasy or broken pavements cause fatal falls, especially among those in the later years.

Handrails on stairs, sufficient illumination, clear passageways, and non-sliding rugs or carpets can prevent many fatal falls.

We need safety campaigns in our own homes.
