Visitors At Church Bazaar Agree That's The Place To Buy Presents

Prince of Peace Episcopal Church bazaar hung up a new record of over $1,400 Friday and Saturday of last week, exceeding its quota in all departments. As the purchaser who found a big silver dollar in a fifty-cent surprise package remarked, "That's what I call getting your money's worth." Business, reports Mrs. Paul Goddard, chairman of the surprise package booth, was very brisk for an hour after the silver dollar was unwrapped.

Folks who failed to do their Christmas shopping at the fifth annual bazaar made a big mistake, for values were remarkable, and novelties many and various. The sock monkeys labelled for vestrymen, brought down the house. Rev. William McClelland's wore a modest white clerical collar.

Nobody could hope to give a complete resume, but here are some of the highlights:

Miniature chairs, settees, bedsteads, dressers, from Charles

Brooke's wood-working hobby room, decorated in bright enamel, with drawers that slid in and out, and delicate chairs and drop-leaf tables ready for the doll's house.

A display of gay bread-boards shaped like pigs, a smaller edition for cutting onions, letter holders, card trays, etc., the work of Jack Stanley's teen-age Sunday School Class.

The White Elephant table, which doubled its quota. A young Wilkes-Barre art student, George Lutz, made the impressive white elephant mural which designated the table.

Mrs. Alwen Mortensen again made and dressed dozens of dolls, clowns, and stuffed animals, worked up doll clothes and hats from odds and ends, and did her usual brisk business.

Flannel shirts in all sizes were snapped up almost as soon as they were laid on the tables. Mrs. Calvin Hall says there are never enough to go around. They looked even handsomer than they did last year, their gay checks and plaids making a nice spot of color.

It was Francis Ambrose who made the T-V stools in animal motif, Al Jones and Charles Brooke who painted them.

Couples Club served refreshments, and Mrs. Oswald Griffiths was in charge of the Corner Store with its colorful display of jams, pickles and jellies.

The smocked dresses in delicate pastels made their usual appeal to mother of little girls in need of party clothes.

Ralph Postorive arranged for a display of tweed suits and soft flannels.

The polished cowhide suitcase, auctioned off Saturday night, went to Ralph Postorive, who had made a substantial preliminary bid on it. The two-piece, lined in cinnamon colored suede and fitted, was a contribution from Juan Peron, president of Argentina.

Cleared through the State Department to eliminate possible entanglement in red tape, 66 letters were sent to foreign embassies and royal

Church Sponsors Shopping Nights

Cooperate With Back Mt. Lumber

Several of the larger church congregations in the area have availed themselves of the opportunity offered by Granville Sowden to sponsor an evening of shopping at Back Mountain Lumber Company. Sharyertown Methodist has reserved

Wednesday, November 17. Trucks-ville Methodist is signed up for November 20. Gate of Heaven, November 27; St. Paul's Lutheran, December 1; St. Therese's, December 4. Dallas Junior Womens Club, Thursday of this week.

Participating churches will have the privilege of a 10% commission from all merchandise sold in the main store, from 6 p.m. until closing at 9. This includes toys, hardware, house-hold equipment, but not coal or lumber.

Dates for Prince of Peace Episcopal, and Dallas Methodist churches are being arranged and will be announced. Smaller congregations may band together in order to take advantage of this offer, Mr. Sowden says, but for the benefit of organizations participating, it is necessary to get a good crowd for most favorable results.

Christian Friendly Class

Christian Friendly Class, Huntsville Christian Church, will sponsor a Paper Demonstration in the church social rooms Thursday evening at 8.
