Young People Have Opportunity To Be Checked At Heart Clinic
 Persons suffering with heart murmurs or other heart irregularities have an excellent opportunity at this time to be examined at the Rheumatic Fever Clinic in Wilkes-Barre, Dr. John F. Giering, medical director of the clinic, has disclosed. For the first time in its eight years, Rheumatic Fever Clinic is not faced with a large backlog of patients, and can accept new patients with assurance they will be examined almost immediately, the director added.
 If a physician is undecided about a heart murmur a patient has, he may refer the patient to the clinic for evaluation. Any person 21 years of age or under is eligible for examination at the clinic. A person does not need to have had rheumatic fever to be admitted to the clinic. No one is accepted at the clinic unless referred there by an attending physician, the clinic head made clear.
 The clinic is in Wilkes-Barre General Hospital. Appointments may be made by calling the Rheumatic Fever Clinic at the hospital. Two clinics are held monthly.
 Since its inception in 1947 until last May, 808 patients were examined. Many cases of congenital heart disease have been operated and thus far there has been no mortality.
 Pennsylvania has 17 rheumatic fever clinics. The medical director of each clinic is certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine or Pediatrics. Each clinic has a secretary and there is always a nurse in attendance.
 In each case, a history is taken at the Rheumatic Fever Clinic. A complete physical examination is performed and any laboratory studies are done that are considered necessary, such as urinalysis, blood count, sedimentation rate, electrocardiograph, chest X-ray or fluoroscopy. There is no charge to the patient as this program is underwritten by the Rheumatic Fever Division of the State Health Department, Dr. Giering emphasized.
 A report of the examination is sent to the referring physician with recommendations for treatment. No treatment is given at the Rheumatic Fever Clinic. The patient will be accepted for re-examination only on the permission of the referring physician.
 When the diagnosis of congenital heart disease is made, there is provision for further study in selected medical centers and provision for surgery where indicated. When the family is unable to meet this expense, the Division of Rheumatic Heart Disease will assume the cost of examination and hospitalization.
 First, the patient must be seen in a State Rheumatic Heart Disease Clinic. With the approval of the family and family physician, the director of the clinic sends a request for further study and surgery if indicated. The division of Rheumatic Heart Disease will arrange for an appointment in either Philadelphia or Pittsburgh. The family and family doctor are notified of the appointment date and told that, if an operation is indicated, the child will be given a date for operation at the time of examination. At the same time, a State nurse is asked to visit the family and evaluate the home situation. Where payment for the operation cannot be met by the

What's In A Name? Any Good Ideas?
 Since the addition of Monroe Township to Dallas-Franklin joint family either directly or through any insurance, the Division of Rheumatic Heart Disease will assume the responsibility for the cost of the examination and hospitalization.
 State Rheumatic Heart Disease program has been approved by the Medical Society of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. Similar action has been taken by each medical society of the county in which a clinic has been established.
 district, there has been some discussion by the board and by the public concerning a name for the school district and for the high school. A little research has been done into the history of the area to determine whether or not there are names that should be preserved. If anyone has good suggestions for the name of the joint district encompassing Dallas, Franklin, and Monroe Townships or for a suitable high school name, these suggestions may be telephoned or written to the school office.
