It is often quite an experience to observe some of the small children who come into Toyland. For instance, a few days ago a little boy, wandering around by himself, as his mother talked to "Florence" came upon a large stuffed clown which had one arm raised as though waving to the youngster. And quite unconsciously and also quite naturally the little fellow looked up at the clown, waved and said aloud, "Hi".

On Tuesday, November 22nd, we entered the new cycle for you Sagittarius folks born between Nov. 22 and Dec. 21. According to the stars and our real-for-sure astrologer, you are athletic. You possess good judgment and have the ability to make quick decisions. In your case success and wealth should come early. You are affectionate and considerate, making good husbands, wives or parents, as the case may be. You like others and enjoy social activities. All in all, looks like you are a pretty good guy though I do believe our astrologer was being overly generous.

Brr-r-r, that old north wind is beginning to feel his oats and vent his anger on us who are not bound for Florida. But on these cold nights there's nothing more comforting than a few apple logs crackling in the fireplace. Now, if you need any fireplace equipment, such as screens, wood baskets, andirons or fire sets, now's the time to latch onto them 'cause we have them on sale now at 10% off. This is a good bargain in these attractive wrought iron and brass pieces.

Our "Ginny" sure is a charmer, she's captured the hearts of all, both children and adults. Just the other day Mrs. Malcolm Kitchen came into the store to get a "Ginny" doll as a gift but we've been selling them so fast that we hadn't time to get many more into their various costumes. As "Winnie" started to dress the doll for Mrs. Kitchen she was called to the phone and suggested Mrs. Kitchen finish the dressing of "Ginny". Well, before she got through, Mrs. Kitchen dressed three dolls and had a grand time doing it. You and your daughter or granddaughter will have just as much fun with your "Ginny" doll as Mrs. Kitchen did.

We live in an age of miracles... take the new Sunbeam handle. Take the new Sunbeam Toaster for instance. It's almost human as it practically takes the bread from your hand, quickly and quietly lowers it, browns it just right and silently puts it back in your hand. What a nice surprise as a Christmas present for someone of whom you are very fond.

Our great white hunter, "Morry", the manager at our Dallas store, got a little trigger happy the other day when he was out bear hunting. In Mitchell's swamp, near DuPont, he came face-to-face with a nice, young, black bear. It was a toss-up as to which was the most startled. "Morry" first the heebejeebes and he high-tailed it out of sight before "Morry" regained his composure for a second shot.

Listen for the bells. Santa will be here at 6 o'clock Friday and 3 p.m. on Saturday at our Shavertown store. Bring the kiddies in for their free gifts.

And give us the little happenings that occur at your house. If we put 'em in the column you'll get a gift certificate. Bring into either store or call Bob Bachman at The Dallas Post.

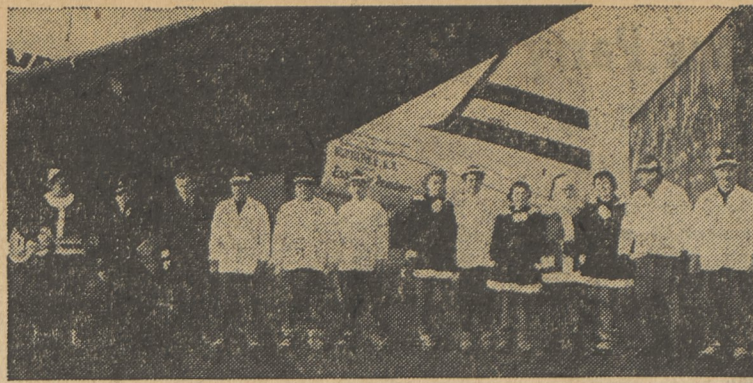

Roy Troxell stopped in at the store the other day, after having attended a wedding down in Virginia. We asked him how the bride looked and he said, "Oh she was very beautiful" and in describing her dress he explained that, "the dress was street length or floor level or something like that". Isn't it marvelous what men know about women's fashions?

Mrs. Louis Jordan came in with Mrs. Cliff Johnson, of Trucksville and they were looking for some glassware for a Christmas gift. Mrs. Jordan said, "I know they have it, it's called Duan Hines or something like that". Course what she was really looking for was the Currier & Ives pattern in Libbey glassware, not the famous food expert.

Many people shop for useful gifts. The practical young people of today want useful, time-saving things for their homes. For weddings, showers and Christmas gifts surprise your favorites with something to make their home comfortable. Here are a few suggestions: Clothes Basket, waist high to save stooping, light to handle. An attractive rigid, adjustable ironing board to sit while you iron. O' Cedar sponge mops, your hands do not touch the water. Cake holders, salad sets, canister sets, corn poppers, covered oblong cake pans and oh, so many others at both our stores.

Issue Posters For Christmas

Spirits-less Office Parties Are Urged

"What are YOU taking home this Christmas?" is the question asked on a poster being distributed by the Christmas Safety Committee in an effort to promote "spirits-less parties."

The choices suggested are: "a load of presents and good cheer?—or just a load?"

A letter offering the poster was mailed to 6500 business executives throughout Pennsylvania by the Committee's Secretary, George W. Lewis, Jr. of Philadelphia. Referring to the office party, the letter states "more and more bosses are okaying fun, food and fellowship for Christmas, but keeping liquor off the list" It is also pointed out that drinks are frequently the cause of difficulties at the parties themselves and that tragic traffic and other accidents off-times occur after the parties are over.

Timely reminders from the Pennsylvania State University College of Agriculture.

Liquid Measure—Set your cup on a level surface before you measure liquids for recipes. If you use a glass measuring cup, look at it on the same level to be sure the liquid comes up to the mark (reminds Louise W. Hamilton, Penn State extension nutritionist).

Hang Clothing—A low rod and low hooks in a closet are a help for storing a young child's clothing. He can reach clothes easily and also help put them away.

Compliment Complexion—If your skin is ruddy, it will be emphasized if you wear red or green. In the same way, if you have a pale complexion it will have some color reflected in it if you wear these colors.

Try Toast Rounds—At your next party try toasted rounds of bread spread with chopped hard-cooked eggs and olives, moistened with mayonnaise, suggests Marjorie J. Wormeck, Penn State extension nutritionist. Store Cookie Sheets—Because cookie sheets are light in weight and can be picked up easily by the edge, you can store them between vertical partitions on a shelf of the wall cabinet.

Need Calcium—Young folks need the calcium in milk to build good, sturdy bones. Older folks need calcium to keep their bones from becoming brittle, reports Helen L. Denning, Penn State extension nutritionist.
