Wolfe, Brace, On Fruit Panel

Brace Again Heads Horticulturists

Local fruit growers met with others in the profession at Jackson Fire Hall last Thursday to study insect control and assay different methods of spraying. Stanley Gesell and Dr. E. E. Honey, Pennsylvania State University entomologist and pathologist, outlined procedure for adequate control, and distributed spraying schedules. It was announced by E. V. Chadwick, Luzerne County Farm Agent, that copies could be obtained by fruit growers not able to attend the meeting, by application at the County Office on Water Street, Wilkes-Barre.

Harold Brace of Centermoreland, Walter Wolfe of Lehman, and Ben Dagosten, Sugarloaf, served on a panel which discussed orchard management. Carl Bittner, extension pomologist, was moderator. Topics touched upon included brush removal, deer and rabbit control, and chemical thinning of apples. The panel was followed by discussion of culture of small fruits such as grapes and strawberries.

Re-elected for another year were association officers: Mr. Brace, Center Moreland, president; Paul Knolly, Sugarloaf, vice president; William Kiser, Berwick RD, secretary-treasurer.

Mrs. Ruth S. Darbie, extension Home Economist, held a meeting for women during the afternoon, in which she talked about selection of household linens.

Suggestions were made to be referred to the Ways and Means Committee for plans for a roller skating party and a basketball game between the parents and the junior high school students. Mr. John Rosser, high school principal of the Dallas-Franklin-Monroe Joint Schools, gave a well planned comprehensive report on the school's Guidance Program which has as its aim the "all round development of the child."
