Timely reminders from the Pennsylvania State University College of Agriculture.

Use Good Seed—Certified alfalfa seed costs just 3 cents a pound more than uncertified seed. If alfalfa is seeded at 10 pounds per acre, it costs just 30 cents more per acre to use certified seed, explains Albert Cooper, Penn State extension agronomist. He thinks this is a small price to pay for purebred seed.

Like Birdsfoot Trefoil—Many Pennsylvania dairymen have been well pleased with results obtained when birdsfoot trefoil has been used for pasture, silage, or hay.

Use Superphosphate—There are many advantages to using a superphosphate in dairy stables. It keeps down odors, helps keep the barn dry, helps destroy bacteria, and retards loss of nitrogen in the manure.

Choose Right Rod—Be sure to choose the right welding rod for the metal you are working on, warns John Walker, Penn State extension agricultural engineer.

Great Lakes About Ready To Resume Ore Boat Trade

Harry H. Allen, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry H. Allen, Harveys Lake, rejoined the steamer Millsop of the Hanna Ore Lines at Ashtabula, Ohio, on Tuesday. Notified that the season would start several days earlier than usual, he was prepared to leave his winter employment with the Delco Company in Rochester, but expects to be employed there again during the slack Lake boat season next winter.

A deck watch at present, Harry, 19, starting his third season with the Lake boats, expects to classify as Able Seaman within a few weeks. The big ore boat plies Lake Superior to Duluth, outlet for the mammoth open pit iron ore mines of the Mesabi Range, delivering the ore to Buffalo, Cleveland, and Detroit.
