He went overseas in June 1944 with the 94th Division of the Third Army under General George Patton. He received a citation from Major General Walton Walker for "helping clear the Saar Moselle Triangle and seizing a bridgehead east of the Saar River, helping to capture the fortified town of Trier." In 1954 he was appointed Supervisor to complete the unexpired term of Earl Booth who resigned. That term expired in December 1955. He is still acting as Roadmaster having been appointed in February by George Bray for the South District.

He has been requested to run for Committeeman by many of his neighbors. He is anxious to serve them well.
