Junior Showmanship, Obedience
To Be Featured At Kennel Show

Junior Showmanship Competition and Obedience Trial Classes will again be important features of the Back Mountain Kennel Club dog show, to be held Saturday, July 14 at the Irem Temple Horse Show Grounds.

Any dog entered at the show is eligible for Junior Showmanship competition without an additional entry fee.

The classes are:
Novice A—for boys and girls 10 to 12 years of age who have never won a Junior Showmanship competition.

Novice B—for boys and girls 12 to 16 years of age who have never won a Junior Showmanship competition.

Open—for boys and girls 10 to 16 years of age who have won one or more Junior Showmanship competitions.

The dog must be owned by the handler or some member of the immediate family. Violators of this rule will be disqualified.

Prizes in this class are awarded solely for skillful handling, merits of the dog not to count.

Judge for Junior Showmanship classes will be a professional handler, to be announced the day of the show.

Interest and obedience work for dogs has increased tremendously in Wyoming Valley in the last two years, and local exhibitors will have the opportunity to enter their trained dogs in competition at the show. When a dog and handler have completed a ten week course in obedience they are then eligible to enter the Novice A class and try for the first leg on a C.D. degree.

The regular obedience classes at the show will be Novice A, Novice B, Open A, Open B, and Utility. Spectators will be able to observe dogs in action after they have had advanced training.

Scoring is based on how well a dog carries out a prescribed set of exercises intended as the basis for useful work.

Winners will be awarded the same class cash prizes offered in the regular classes.

Judge for the obedience classes will be Robert Noerr, Stamford, Connecticut.

Judging will begin at 10 a.m. and continue throughout the day.

Entries close at noon, Tuesday, July 3.
