Suez and The Stock Market
Although there may be several good reasons for taking profits today on stocks, certainly the Suez scare is no reason for selling stocks at the present time. What will ultimately create a crash in the stock market will be some totally unexpected event which no one can now forecast. Therefore, I repeat my forecast that England and France and Egypt will arrive at a peaceful settlement; but whatever happens, the United States will keep out of any fighting. Furthermore, we will continue our present policy of withdrawing troops from Europe and reorganizing our fighting strength to conform to the new nuclear policy.

Not unlike jazz itself, Louis Armstrong was born in a back-of-town part of New Orleans, La., on January 4, 1900. When he was five, his parents separated and he went to live with his mother, a sister and his great-grandmother in the heart of the city. Here he imbibed the exciting sounds of the new jazz, strolled around the Storyville section of town singing and playing a four-string "guitar" made of a cigar box. Bunk Jones taught him to play music by ear.

Louis learned something about reading music two years later after he was arrested and sent to the Waif's Home for a year's discipline. Here, under the director's benevolent guidance the young boy was taught to play bugle and cornet and became leader of the home's brass band.

He eventually began taking trumpet lesson from the local idol of 1917, "King" Oliver.

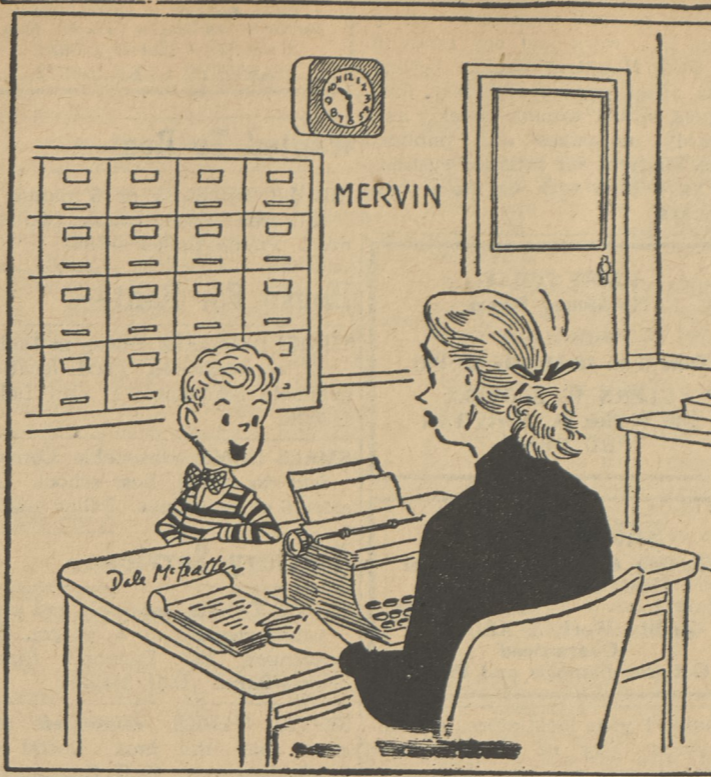

Since 1923, Armstrong had recorded at least 1000 records, many of which are collector's items today. His European tours have taken him to England, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Holland, Belgium, France and Italy. He returned to Europe in 1952 and again this year, playing before England's delighted Princess Margaret, even as he had years before for her grandfather, King George V. In May of this year, he played to 100,000 cheering Africans in Accra, Gold Coast.

HALL OF FAME will shift from a Sunday afternoon show to Sunday night when it returns October 25. Some performances will go on at 7:30, others at 9 p.m. They will be 90-minute shows. "Born Yesterday," costarring Mary Martin and Paul Douglas will be the season's premiere.

Maurice Evans will appear in two productions.

Mrs. Andrew Is Sitting Up Nights, Making More Fur Products For Fair

Tommy Andrew, Shavertown rabbit breeder, and his wife have been going to State and County fairs with exhibits of rabbits and rabbit fur products. At Syracuse last week, the couple ran completely out of fur novelties, and Mrs. Andrew has been working nights to make up the deficiency. She makes a line of muffs and caps and gloves from the by-products of Tommy's frozen rabbit industry.

At Syracuse, Mrs. Andrew stayed on with the rabbit booth while Tommy returned to Plymouth, where he is art director in the High School. Tommy judged and showed rabbits, winning best standard chinchilla, and a first for the best display of chinchillas.

On Saturday, Tommy took an exhibit to Reading, entering twenty rabbits, and finding a market for more fur products.

This week, Mrs. Andrew is at Hughesville, showing animals and selling fur products at the Lycoming County Fair, while Tommy teaches.

Judging at the Bloomsburg Fair will take place Tuesday, September 25. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew expect to show. The Rabbit Breeders Association hopes to have 600 entries. A category for junior exhibitions under sixteen has been established. Tommy says he hopes the class will draw well, as in his opinion the raising of rabbits is both interesting and profitable to junior and senior high school groups.

Rabbit Breeders will stage their annual show at the November 3 convention in Allentown.

development six miles from Philadelphia.

Mr. Appel, former representative of Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp. for Northeastern Pennsylvania, is taking a similar position in Philadelphia with the company. The family moved here from Baltimore in 1953.

Randy, seven years old, is in the second grade at Dallas-Franklin-Monroe, and feels skeptical about changing schools. Mrs. Appel says there is a newly finished school three blocks from their new home, and hopes it is not already crowded because of the mushrooming of the housing development.

Mrs. Appel has been active in the Dallas Junior Womens Club, where she was elected in May to the office of assistant corresponding secretary. She and her husband hope to come back to Dallas for the winter and spring dances.
