

Back Mountain Church League Plans Booster Night Saturday

Many Fine Prizes Will Be Awarded Fans After Third Game At Township Gymnasium

By JIM LOHMAN

Sparked by the terrific shooting of Harry Derhammer, Alderson had little trouble downing Prince of Peace to the tune of 70-47. It was all Derhammer this week as he was the only Alderson player to hit double figures, but his 30 points told the story when the game ended. Prince of Peace put two men in double figures but couldn't match Derhammer's feat. Hons with 15 and K. Shaffer with 12 led the losers. Alderson held a slim 32-29 lead at intermission but from there on in rolled in high gear to collect 38 points to its opponents 18.

Huntsville Edges East Dallas

Once again East Dallas extended its opponents down to the final whistle but Lady Luck wasn't with it and it bowed to Huntsville by a 49-44 score after leading throughout the whole game until the fourth period. Clint and Charlie Brobst spearheaded the attack for the winners who collected 28 points between them. Race was high for the losers with 15.

Size Too Much For Saints

With five men towering four to six inches over the six-foot mark Shavertown downed a small St. Therese's outfit 51-46, but had to fight all the way as it trailed most of the game after opening with a 13-8 edge in the first period. St. Therese's didn't have a man to compare with this height as the five men they had on the floor didn't even go six-foot. Leading 37-55 going into the final period the Saints ran out of steam as they had but five men in uniform. Widmann led often heard in connection with rear-end collisions. The reason for this excuse is disclosed in reports from both the New Jersey Turnpike Authority and the Pennsylvania Joint Safety Research Group. They discovered that rear-end collisions were significantly higher during darkness on straight-up roadway. In fact, John R. Crosby, assistant traffic engineer with the New Jersey Turnpike Authority, reported that twice as many rear-end collisions occur at night as in the daytime.

Theoretically, rear-end collisions could be eliminated if all vehicles on highways could be made to travel at the same speed. However, highway engineers are quick to point out that enforcing a strict program to slow down speeders and speed up crawlers is almost a physical impossibility and a financial improbability.

A recent nation-wide inspection of more than 1,677,000 motor vehicles showed that more than a fourth—26.6 per cent—of all mechanical defects were rear lights. The results of motor vehicle inspections and the higher nighttime collision rate have prompted traffic engineers to call for better rear-end lighting and widespread use of reflective materials.

The traffic engineers' suggestions already have been carried out in a number of ways. Some states are covering license plates with materials that reflect headlights from 2,000 feet away and provide motorists with an ever-present safety device. Pennsylvania Turnpike officers check the rear lights of vehicles entering the pike in an attempt to cut down rear-end collisions.

Truck and bus lines are putting reflective sheeting on their vehicles in an effort to reduce rear-end collisions. Greyhound bus lines report that rear-end collisions dropped 14 per cent the first year the lines' busses were reflectorized and 18 per cent the second.

One automobile manufacturer, Plymouth, is experimenting with reflective body paint and another, Ford, is conducting experiments with new devices especially designed to prevent rear-end collisions.

Traffic engineers are slow cutting down the number of rear-end collisions, but it is up to all of us—in the individual driver's seats—to take extra precautions ourselves.
