

Cabaret Scheduled Saturday At Irem

Potentate Edwin E. Connell, of Irem Temple, announces a holiday weekend cabaret for members and their guests at Irem Temple Country Club on Saturday night.

For the Washington's Birthday weekend there will be a special program of entertainment to be followed by dancing and games.

Preceding the entertainment there will be a dinner commencing at 6:30 for which reservations can be made before noon Saturday either at the Temple on North Franklin Street or by calling Richard Brace, manager at the Country Club.

WHAT'S NEW—A threaded nail that drives easier, costs less and has 50 to 200 per cent greater holding power than the ordinary one.

Mounted Swan Now On Display At Back Mountain Memorial Library

The whistling swan which was shot on Huntsville Reservoir, is now on exhibit at Back Mountain Memorial Library, the gift of Howard Risley who obtained permission from the State to have it mounted. Edwin Johnson, president of the Bird Club which meets on second Thursdays in the Library Annex, gave information about swans at Thursday night's session.

Swans nest, Mr. Johnson said in the far north, on the shores of the Arctic Ocean and the upper reaches of Hudson Bay, building a platform of reeds, and laying half a dozen eggs. The cygnets hatch late in June, and grow rapidly under the influence of constant sunshine. For a period before the cygnets are able to fly, the adults lose their flight feathers, making the entire swan family an easy prey for Indians, who kill them for food and for their skins and feathers.

Late in the fall the swans start for the south over three flyways, Atlantic, Pacific, and down the Mississippi Valley. The Atlantic flights stop off briefly in Massachusetts, and winter at North Carolina.

They fly so high, following the lonesome ridges, and shunning populous areas, that they are seldom seen except when sleet forces them down.

In taking off, they make a long, splashing run, beating their wings to get elevation, and striking the water with their wings as well as their feet. Unless the wind is very strong when they head into it, it takes them some time to attain any altitude.

The young are an ash grey, and young adults still show traces of grey in their plumage. When an adult is three years old, he is pure white. The specimen at the Library still retains some of the cygnet coloring, though nearly white.

The distinguishing feature of a whistling swan, according to Mr. Johnson, is the distance from the nostrils to the tip of the bill, shorter than the distance from eye to nostril, and the yellow mark on the bill below the eye. In the case of the vanishing trumpeter swan, the nostril is placed closer to the eye, and there is a characteristic loop in the windpipe.

Whistling swans have a deep bass voice, but the leader of a flight directs his flock in a shrill whistle, an odd woodwind note, not heard at any other time.

The tale of a swan singing before it dies, Mr. Johnson added, may not be entirely a myth. Hunters report an eerie sound, a peculiar keening noise, as a mortally wounded swan falls to earth.

Frank Jackson reported that several years ago he saw a flock of forty whistling swans making a clamorous landing on Harveys Lake, and taking off the next day into a high wind.

Dies In Woods Of Heart Attack

Services Today For Lazarus B. Prudhoe

Lazarus B. Prudhoe, 60, who dropped dead while walking his dog in the woods a few hundred yards from his home on Overbrook Avenue late Tuesday afternoon, will be buried this afternoon in Lehman Cemetery. Rev. Robert D. Yost, Shavertown Methodist Church, will conduct services from the Prudhoe home at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Prudhoe became alarmed at 6 p.m. when the dog returned alone. Mr. Prudhoe had taken the dog out at 3:30. Neighbors and police were alerted and a search instituted.

Jack Smith discovered the body lying face down, while searching with William Walworth, Joseph Sims, Carl Dick, Charles Smith, and Joseph Silic.

State Police at Wyoming Barracks and Deputy Coroner Elmer T. Williams were notified of the man's disappearance. Williams pronounced Prudhoe dead as result of a heart attack. Chief James Gansel and state troopers investigated.

Dallas Community ambulance stood by but was not needed. The ambulance crew consisted of Joseph Hand, William Wright, Charles Flack, North Berti and William Berti.

Mr. Prudhoe was formerly employed by the State Highway Department. He worked for a time at AC&F in Berwick, and in the mines. He was a veteran of World War I, having served in the Navy for eight years as a blacksmith first class. He was a member of Luzerne Post 55, American Legion, and Wyoming Monument Post 396, VFW, Wyoming. He had had a similar attack of angina on Christmas Eve.

Surviving are his wife, the former Edith Rogers of Forty Fort; children: Mrs. Ruth Gassen, Madison, Wis.; Mrs. Gladys Frady and Mrs. Erma Harry, Washington, D. C.; also six grandchildren; a brother, Robert, Baltimore, Md.; and a sister, Mrs. Rose Willis, Wilkes-Barre.

Arrangements by Bronson.

Attends Texas Convention

Ambrose Gavigan, owner of Gavy's Market, Trucksville, spent four days last week in Dallas, Texas. He was sent as a delegate for the Economy Stores in this area to attend the Grocer's Convention which brought grocers there from all over the United States, Canada and Hawaii.

This was Gavigan's first trip to Texas and his longest airplane ride. He was quite impressed with the southwest and came back with a good report for his fellow grocers in the Economy Store chain.

then the trolley, with Harveys Lake, a new picnic and resort area, attracting recreation crowds. Steamboats plied the lake.

The Dallas Fair was founded on a forty-acre plot on land belonging to the Honeywell family. The Honeywells came originally from Pittston, the vanguard of the family taking four days to traverse the rough country, cutting down trees to clear the way for their horses and wagons.

From 1836 to the early 19 hundreds, preparations for the annual fair were the hub of social activity around which the community revolved.

Miss Dorrance's talk is worthy of more complete publication, providing a background for younger people of the community as well as for newcomers.

Mrs. Lewis LeGrand and Mrs. T. M. B. Hicks poured for Mesdames Lloyd Kear, Gordon Rowe, Paul Gross, Stephen Davis, Peter D. Clark, Cora Finn, C. M. Cooper, Franz Scholl, Kenneth Herwig, James B. Ambulance Drive Going Well, More Cards Ready

Dallas Borough and Dallas Township residents who have not yet received coin cards for the current ambulance fund drive, may procure them by calling Dallas 4-7931 and giving name and address. Extra coin cards have now arrived and will be distributed where needed.

Leslie Barstow, drive chairman, reports that $100 has already been received in advance of collection. Checks, he says, should be made out to Dallas Community Ambulance Association. Service clubs are already making allowance for contribution in their budgets.

Card Of Thanks

Mrs. Guy May and Mrs. John DeRemer wish to express deep appreciation for kindness shown them during their recent bereavement, the death of husband and father in Beaumont, and to acknowledge flowers, cards, gifts, and loan of cars. These kindnesses will never be forgotten.

Kills Opossum

Morton Connelly, Lehman-Ide-town Road, dispatched an opossum in his chicken coop with a pitchfork last week when the sly little fellow "playing 'possum," fatally closed his eyes and wound his tail around Mort's neck making himself easy prey.
