

Flee Flames In Night Clothing

Spectators As Usual Hamper Fire-Fighters

Three people fled the flames in their night clothing Friday night when their home burned to the ground in the Carverton area.

Still at Nesbitt Memorial Hospital is Lauren Wayne Savage, 38, badly burned about the feet and face. Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Reth, with whom their foster-brother, Lauren Savage, lived, were uninjured, and sheltered at the home of a neighbor, Mrs. Emma Daniels.

Truckville Fire Company, victim of poor directions from an excited neighbor who spotted the blaze, led a cavalcade of spectators in and out of country roads before locating the fire. Twenty minutes after the alarm was given at 10:45, with the fire company on the scene, the wall collapsed onto a rabbit hutch, incinerating the rabbits, and the fire truck doused the remains of the two-story, six-room structure.

The dilapidated frame house on the old Gilligan place was a total ruin. What caused the fire is a mystery. One theory is that a kerosene drum on the back porch may have been ignited by a spark from the chimney. The house was heated by a wood burning stove and lighted by kerosene lamps.

Fire Chief Vought Long voices the plaint of every fire chief in the Back Mountain, in saying that if folks who do not intend to help fight the fire would not clog the roads it would be greatly appreciated. The fire truck reached the scene, but if more fire trucks had been called for, they could not have negotiated the narrow, winding roads, parked solid with cars of gaping citizens.

Mother's Day Is 50 Years Old

It was on May 9, 1907, in Philadelphia, that Miss Anna Jarvis, remembering the death of her beloved mother just a year before, conceived the thought of a day dedicated to all mothers. She began interesting individuals and organizations in naming the second Sunday in May as Mother's Day, and the initial observance was held in her home city on May 10, 1908.

Over my heart in the days that have flown,
No love like mother-love ever has shown;
No other worship abides and endures,
Faithful, unselfish and patient, like yours.

Fortunately no one was seriously injured.

Driver of the ancient Plymouth sedan which was almost a complete wreck was Joseph G. Regan, 1217 Third Avenue, Berwick. His passenger was J. Russell Borowiec, 511 Pine Street, Williamsport.

Three Hundred Take Part In 7th Career Day

Students Are Given Opportunity To See Vocations Operating

More than three hundred persons were in attendance at the Seventh Annual Back Mountain Branch Town and Country YMCA Career Day held Tuesday at Central "Y", Wilkes-Barre.

Working together with Dallas Kiwanis Club, the "Y" offered discussion groups in twenty different vocations. These groups resulted from interest shown by selected students from each of the four participating Back Mountain Area High Schools.

Following the invocation by Donna Price of Lehman-Jackson-Ross Tri Hi-Y Club, and the litany by Donna LaBar and Donn Goodwin, of the Dal-King Junior Tri Hi-Y and Hi-Y Clubs, Bradley Updyke introduced R. E. Neal of Back Mountain "Y", John Churry of Kiwanis Club, and J. Traver Nobel, president of the Wilkes-Barre YMCA. Mr. Updyke is vice president of the Dallas-Franklin-Monroe Hi-Y Club.

Others participating in the two assemblies were Sandra Baird, Dal-pha Tri Hi-Y Club, who accompanied on the piano, and Florence Laffin, Lake-Nowen Tri Hi-Y Club who offered the benediction.

John A. Hoch, Dean of Instruction at Bloomsburg State Teachers' College, spoke at morning and afternoon assemblies on "Careers Limited."

He based his talk on three important questions: "How long till each of us finishes school? How long until each of us will be earning a living? What are we going to do to earn that living?" His humorous manner aided the students in remaining interested in the material being offered.

A highlight of Career Day was the innovation of transporting some of the discussion groups to the actual scene of the particular vocation. Students interested in nursing and the medical field were taken to General Hospital.

Beauticians of the future were able to obtain a more complete understanding of this field through their visit to Empire Beauty College.

By visiting Bell Telephone Company, girls interested in this work were able to see and better understand the mechanics of the telephone industry.

Back Mountain Branch YMCA Board of Management and Staff thanked all who made the Seventh Annual Career Day a success. Especially thanked were the discussion counsellors and the administrators of the four area High Schools.

In addition Mr. Spiegel, "Y" Secretary, expressed appreciation to teachers who accompanied the students and who assisted in the smooth operation of the conference. They were: Marjorie Downing and Edward H. Edwards of Lehman-Jackson-Ross; Margaret M. Dunn and Hazel E. Baer of Lake-Nowen; Ethel R. Shultz and Kenneth G. Kirk of Dallas-Franklin-Monroe; and Robert Somerville and Joseph W. Rakshys of Westmoreland.

Orchardists Expect Frost

Recall Last Year's Total Crop Loss

Back Mountain fruit men faced disaster again last night, as weather reports indicated frost. Last year frost wiped out almost the entire apple crop.

After an unseasonably warm week following Easter, temperatures plummeted Tuesday night, and light frosts were reported, but with no apparent damage. Wednesday night and early Thursday morning, temperatures were below 32 degrees in outlying districts, but a constant wind prevented frost damage. At present time, weather reports indicated frost Friday morning. Orchardists are fully budded, ready to burst into bloom. Last year's frost damage was severe among the orchardists.

Alva Eggleston, Vernon, planned to use smoke bombs last night. His early trees are already in bloom, his later varieties ready.

At Falls, across the Susquehanna, the apple orchards are fully in bloom at Hunter's.

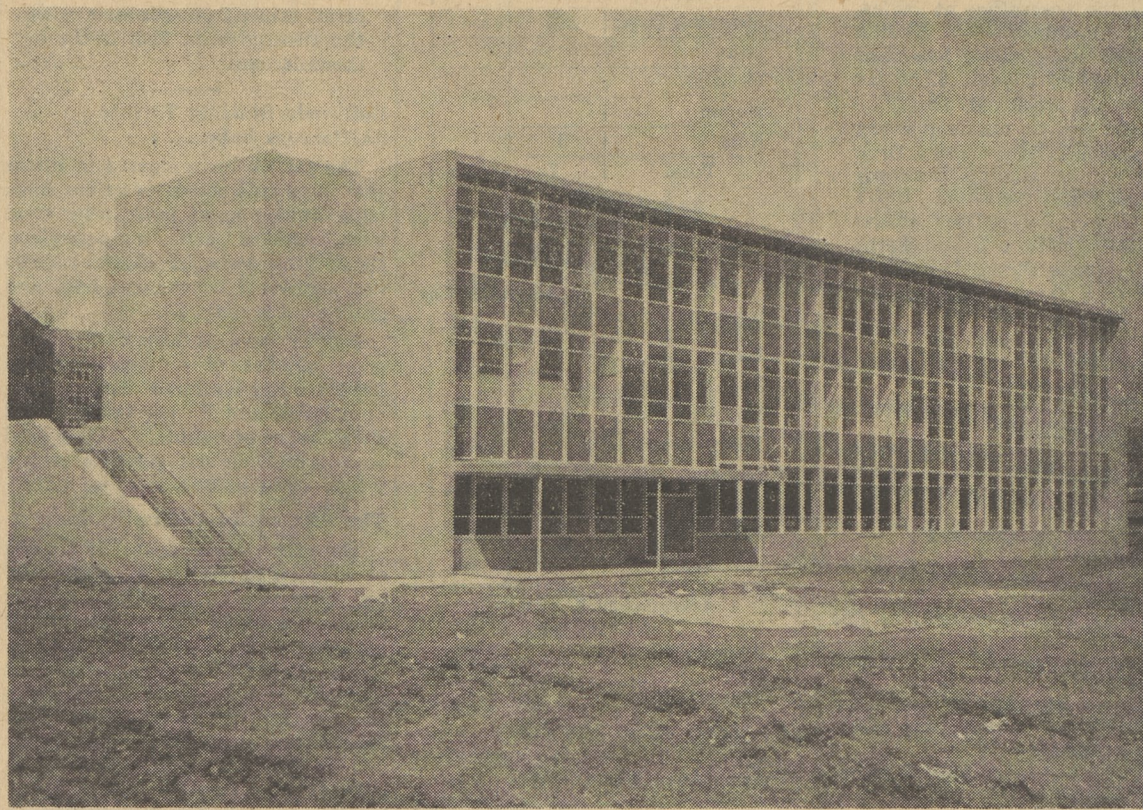

George Berlew at Orange, has forty acres of apples, many trees in full bloom.

Harold Brace, Orange, has a large acreage of peaches, not yet in bloom.

Bishop Hannan Will Dedicate Hafey Building

$450,000 Science Hall One Of Most Modern Anywhere

Bishop Hafey Memorial Science Building will be dedicated on College Misericordia campus Tuesday at 4 with His Excellency Jerome D. Hannan, D. D., Bishop of Scranton presiding.

The modern brick and glass structure of panel wall construction will house the physics, chemistry, biology and home economics departments.

Planned entirely for science, the building is one of the most beautiful and functional to be found on any campus, and its designer, Carl J. Schmidt, has been commended by architects and scientists alike for its completeness.

The first level of the three-story structure will house the Home Economics Department; the second the Biological Department, and the third the Physics and Chemistry Departments.

Home Economics Department is complete with two large experimental dining rooms, living room and bath room where students will have an opportunity to arrange model layouts and receive training in interior decoration. On the same level are located sewing room, fitting room and a room equipped with electric washer and dryer for testing materials for shrinking and color. There is a large lecture room and office for the head of the department. There are twelve cooking units for applied household chemistry. Also on this level are ample storage rooms and equipment for making distilled water for laboratory use.

The second level houses the Biological Department. An innovation is a large well-lighted tiered lecture hall, to be used by all departments. It can be darkened for projection. Bacteriological and genetics laboratories and psycho-educational clinic with observation booth are located here as well as a sisters' lounge and offices, lavatory, storage room for microscopes and other storage rooms.

There are built-in lockers on every level and stair wells connecting the various levels are aluminum trim with balustrades made of woven aluminum wire set in aluminum frames.

Third level is devoted entirely to Chemistry and Physics Departments. Among the many laboratories are those for organic and inorganic chemistry, quantitative and qualitative chemistry, physical chemistry, physics and general science. There is also a balance scale room as well as offices and storage rooms.

The building is finished throughout in pastel shades with all wood and cabinet work of honey maple. All trim and paneling in the halls is of mahogany.

Acoustical ceilings keep noise interference at a minimum. All tables in the laboratories are green with acid resistant surfaces. Vinyl tile in various hues is used throughout.

On the lower exterior level of the building is a large patio of native field stone.

A functional feature of the exterior is that it will require no outside maintenance since it is made entirely of brick, glass, aluminum or porcelain on steel.

Designed by Carl F. Schmidt, it was constructed by Pethic Construction Company at a cost of approximately $490,000.

It is the second of three new buildings that will eventually appear on College Misericordia campus. The first, Regina Social Building, was completed some time ago. The third, a music building is now in the planning stage, and will be started shortly. All were designed by Mr. Schmidt.

On Saturday afternoon the College will hold Open House for all sisters of the area, alumnae and friends.
