Spic And Span Grade School Pupils Exhibit Work In Dallas Borough

Dallas Borough grade school children, dressed in their Sunday best, proudly showed their parents around their classrooms Monday night, to admire the art work posted on the blackboards and inspect work projects on tables and desks.

From 7 to 9 p.m. the halls were thronged with visitors. Small children gazed wide-eyed at the exhibits, and longed for the time when they could join their elder brothers and sisters at school. Small ushers greeted parents in the halls and at the door of each classroom.

Murals spilled out from the classrooms and decorated the halls. Visitors stopping to inspect them were urged to sign their names to the register, to swell the total of the largest attendance on record for a spring exhibit.

Kindergarten rooms buzzed with excitement as parents visited the four airy rooms and marvelled over the clay modelling, finger painting, and craft work.

Mrs. Charles James, Barbara Clark, Polly Lou Vandehout, and Mrs. Marie Borton held open house, Mrs. Borton and Mrs. James on the first floor, and Mrs. Vandehout and Miss Clark in the more recently opened rooms on the second floor.

Most visitors were conveyed to a special room first, then made a methodical tour of the building.

First Grade Has Map

Mrs. Arline Rood's first grade featured a large map of Dallas, with dots and numbers to show where each child lives, and a corresponding directory. Trees, animals, birds and leaves made the blackboards gay. Emily Ziegenfus' picture of three perky little deer in a forest was especially eye-arresting.

Skaters with improbable joint structure glided over the ice in a mural.

Eric Mayer's painstaking relief picture in colored clay, of a landscape with trees, flowering shrubs, birds and beasts, showed comprehension of line and color beyond his years.

Bird Seed Penguins

In Mrs. Antoinette Mason's second grade the accent was on nature, with three-dimensional cut-out birds, leaf transparencies, and intricate pictures of flowers. In bas-relief against a background of Polar snow and ice, were parades of pumpkin-seed penguins, salvaged from the quantities of bird-food which Mrs. Mason's class always collects in quantity for winter visitors to the bird-feeders.

Area 6 PSEA Enjoys Banquet Installs Officers At Annual Function

New officers for Area 6, Pennsylvania State Education Association, were installed at the annual dinner held at The Castle Thursday evening, Edgar Hughes, Jr., relinquishing the chair to Mrs. Martha Smith, Lake-Noxen high school. Elected at the annual dinner, were Mrs. Smith, president; Edward Edwards, Lehman-Jackson-Ross, vice president; Mrs. Oce Austin, Monroe Township, secretary; Barbara Clark, Dallas Borough, treasurer.

Lester B. Squier, supervising principal of Lehman-Jackson-Ross, gave the invocation, Myron Moss, president of Lehman-Jackson-Ross Educators' Association, extended welcome, and Edgar Hughes, retiring president, was master of ceremonies.

Wesley Davies, assistant County Superintendent, made a few remarks after greetings by George Chintola, president of Luzerne County PSEA. T. Stuart Williams, president of N. E. District, PSEA, spoke briefly.

Lucy Valero, past president of California, Pa., PSEA, talked about her trip to Manila and her experiences in the Philippines during the 1956 Fifth Annual Assembly of the World Confederation of Organizations of the Teaching Profession, the largest teachers' group in the world with a membership of two and a half millions, established as fish and marine creatures swimming below the surface.

A departure was a section devoted to kites of various kinds, dragons, seahorses, butterflies, and novelties. Billy Ziegenfuss' dragon kite showed beautiful coloring and composition. Artistic talent runs in that family.

The focus of attention in John Mulhern's sixth grade was a colorful scribble-mural, where haphazard lines and curves were filled in with strong color and definite outline, accented with black, to form a decorative piece of work which was most unusual. One of the smaller spaces apparently suggested a canary, so it was painted yellow and supplied with an eye and bill.

Hall murals varied from Halloween masks and nesting robins, to Columbus and Thanksgiving, taking in flowers and valentines and birds and flowers on the way. Murals in the main were the product of a number of children and were developed in a number of media, including tempera, crayon, water color, and cut-outs.

Teen-Age Gangs Eyed In Theft

Ralph Balut's Car Wheels Are Stolen

Two wheels were stolen some time Monday night from Ralph Balut's Ford in West Dallas. When Mr. Balut went out after breakfast Tuesday morning to start for Wilkes-Barre, he found his car canted at a crazy angle, one wheel gone from the rear, one from the front, both on the same side. He had parked it as usual in the long driveway Monday night.

Jay Bloomer, assistant chief of Dallas Township police, is inclined to think that loss of the car wheels may tie in with teen-age gang activities. Unruly youths from other areas have been making a nuisance of themselves at the bowling alleys recently.

Mrs. Balut is the brave woman who beat off an assailant who attacked her with a stick ten years ago in the same driveway, when she was about to enter her car to visit Mr. Balut in the hospital, where he was on the critical list from bleeding gastric ulcers.

Following that incident, the Baluts bought a German shepherd dog. Recently the dog died of old age. He will be replaced immediately, Mrs. Balut says.

He's A Genuine Black Dog, And He's Lost

Three of Fred Houlihan's children have agreed to contribute $150 apiece from their piggy banks toward a $5 reward offered for return of their lost dog. Jiggs disappeared from his home on the Tunkhannock highway Friday evening when a visiting child left the door open.

Jiggs, a small dog of miscellaneous ancestry, was abandoned as a puppy last year, and taken in by the Houlihan children. When Mrs. Houlihan asked Dr. George Flack for a guess as to his breed, Dr. Flack reflected dubiously for a moment, sizing up Jiggs' points.

"I'd say unhesitatingly, Mrs. Houlihan," he said, "that Jiggs is a genuine black dog."

He has a spot of white under his chin. He will be so happy to be approached in a kindly manner that he will answer to anything from Jiggs to Maggie. His license number is 13912.
