Antique Dealers Display Gleaming Copper, Brasses, At Antique Show

Dealers from Binghamton, Montrose, and Waverly were among nine who showed gleaming brasses, fine china, and Early American furniture at Prince of Peace Antiques Show Tuesday and Wednesday. About 300 guests signed the register, and according to jubilant reports from dealers, made significant purchases.

Mrs. William Lamb, West Dallas, showed six recent portraits, including one of Paul Gross and of Mr. Lamb. Many of her unique lamp shades were displayed through dealers. Mrs. Lamb is developing a good following of antique fans who purchase vintage bases for lamps and require shades which carry out the theme.

Primo Berrettini showed a nice

Chippendale chest and a tavern table. Katie Houghton showed her usual good selection of brass and copper, with quite a bit of furniture, including a plank bottom high chair.

The Red Door, Kingston, had an outsize brass kettle, nice china and glass, and a museum-piece calendar.

Plants were on sale, things suitable for outdoor planting and rock gardens.

Guests from as far away as California were served at card tables for lunch, dinner and snacks. In charge of the kitchen were Mrs. William Krimmel and Mrs. William McClelland, who look forward to expanded quarters next year in the remodelled parish hall, with a chance to serve far more patrons.

No revenue is realized from sale of antiques, only receipts from food and admissions, and items consigned for sale such as plants. Antique dealers rent space for their displays. Twice as many dealers can be accommodated next spring.
