Taught Both Father And Mother At Ross Center

Ralph Rood, in proof-reading an advertisement for Clyde Birth's Dallas Servicenter, reminisced that he had taught both Clyde's father and mother at Ross Center School sixty-one years ago, when Clyde's mother was Nina Moss. Mrs. Birth still lives on the old Homestead at Broadway, but his father Calvin is dead.

Tongue Twister—A group of words that gets your tang all tangled up.

At birth, the average human heart beats 140 times per minute.

Dallas Resident To Publish Book

Dr. Jay A. Young, Norton Avenue, head of the chemistry department at King's College, is author of a laboratory manual for college freshmen which will be published by Prentice-Hall next spring. The work approaches the subject on the find-it-out-yourself plan which was praised in the field of biology in the April issue of the Reader's Digest. There is a definite soft-peddling of routine, corresponding emphasis on student research and learning by doing.

Born in Indiana, Dr. Young graduated from University of Indiana, received his Master's from Oberlin, and his doctorate from Notre Dame. A Lieutenant Commander in the Naval Reserve, Battalion 4-18, he served with the Navy as ordnance officer during World War II. Recently he was on the technical staff at Bikini Atoll for the navy's atom bomb test. In industrial chemistry he worked with detergents and frictional materials. His wife is the former Ann Neff of LaFontaine, Indiana. The couple has ten young children.
