Pillar Of Church Dies In Sleep

Mrs. Lillian Davis Buried At Orcutt

Mrs. Lillian Jones Davis, 92, a pillar of Noxen Methodist Church, died peacefully in her sleep Sunday night, her Bible and glasses under her pillow. She was buried yesterday in Orcutt Cemetery, her Bible in her clasped hands.

Rev. John Gordon and Rev. Ruth L. Underwood, present and former pastors of her church, conducted services from Nulton Funeral Home.

Mrs. Davis attended services as usual on Sunday, and called on friends during the afternoon. When she closed the door of the home where she had lived by herself since her husband Arthur J. Davis died twenty years ago, she was not seen again until her granddaughter, Mrs. Lewis Lord, found her Monday evening.

Mrs. Davis was born in Shavertown, daughter of the late Charles and Polly Lutes Shaver, who later moved to Bowmans Creek. She spent almost her entire life in Noxen.

Living on route 29, close to the church she loved, she became more and more active in its work, serving in the Sunday School and the WSCS, of which she was a charter member. An energetic lady, she scorned lifts to Central Noxen, three quarters of a mile distant, enjoying the brisk walk and the fresh air until far advanced in age. Had she lived until March 15, she would have been ninety-three years old.

For many years she assisted her husband in the Post Office at Noxen until his retirement in 1933, when Lewis Hackling was appointed postmaster.

She is survived by a son and daughter by a former marriage; Harry Jones of Noxen, and Mrs. Albert E. Crispell, wife of a former Noxen man and Armour Leather salesman, who retired to St. Petersburg, Fla. in 1950; and a stepson, Melvin E. Davis, New York City, a vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance. There are ten grandchildren, twenty-four great-grandchildren and three great-great grandchildren.

Pallbearers were David Williams, John Byrne, Albert Jones, Lawrence Race, William Wright, and Elmer Crispell.

Lake-Noxen Band Parents Organize To Purchase Instruments For Band

Lake-Noxen Band Parents have organized, and a drive for membership is now in progress. Howard Piatt, president, appointed Mrs. Bass Sorber to take charge of the Outlet area, and Mrs. Donald Meeker the Noxen area.

The goal is $1,000 for purchase of instruments, as announced at Monday night's board meeting. Parents will meet Tuesday evening at 8 to make plans for raising money for the drums which John Milauskas needs for the band.

A turkey raffle will be one project, the turkey furnished by Bud Edwards of Carverton. There are at present 129 band parents, but more are needed.

A complete drum outfit will take most of the $1,000. Mr. Piatt hopes that former high school students who are no longer using clarinets or other instruments which they have purchased, will donate them for band use. Many younger students, Mr. Milauskas says, are ready for band instruction, but instruments are lacking. Counting twirlers and majorettes, there are seventy-eight band members.

Spectators at the Flaming Foliage Festival at Renovo are reported as saying that the Lake Band would have won first prize for appearance and discipline if prizes had been offered. Band members in their blue and gold outfits made a very good impression.

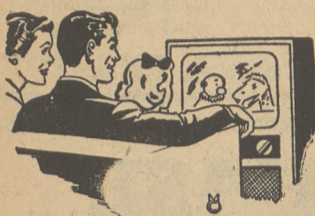

Loyalville Ladies Aid

Loyalville Ladies Aid will meet with Mrs. Melvina Scott November 19 to draw names for the annual exchange of Christmas gifts. This will be the last meeting before the December Christmas party.
