Science Barrier Assembly

"Hair colors so natural only your beautician really knows." This advertisement holds true throughout the nation but not in our school. During a special assembly last Monday morning, ultra-violet rays caused bleached and dyed hair to glow like bright fluorescent or neon lighting in the semi-darkness of the gymnasium. This discovery was the point of several entertaining experiments which proved science could mean fun as well as hard work.

Another experiment dealt with the principle of the electric chair. The capable Dr. Parkerson successfully showed the students and faculty the disintegrating powers of high voltage current upon an ordinary piece of cloth, rather cloth than the students, please!

Those interested in travel in outer space were "shook" by the suspected effect of Martian atmosphere upon the human voice, we would all sound like "Donald Duck." The effect on "Rock and Roll" would be drastic and the general opinion would be to stick to our own planet and atmosphere.

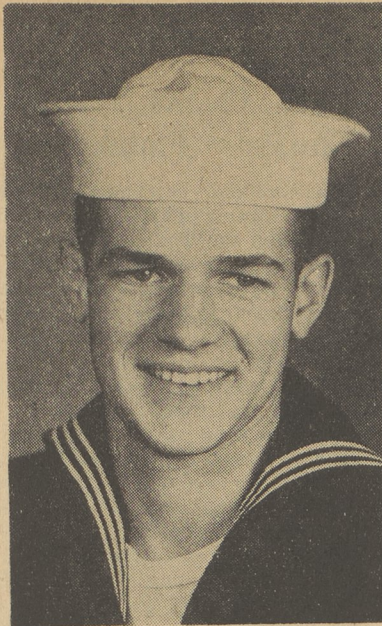

Perhaps the funniest point in the program was a demonstration of the effect of flickering light on animated figures.

We don't know if this program encouraged anyone toward work in a scientific field. It is assured, however, that many now look upon science as a subject which can and does prove fun.

until a program of lighting for the gym can be carried out. Cost of complete gymnasium and stage lighting is estimated at $1,000.

Enrollment Rises

Seventy-four extra pupils from Meadowcrest have to be accommodated with school bus transportation. In order that C. M. Myers may arrange his bus schedule, a suggestion was made that Trucksville grade students might have their lunch hour cut to half an hour, with dismissal at three o'clock to compensate. This would not affect any other elementary school.

Enrollment in area schools, Mr. Martin reported, shows an increase of twenty-five to thirty over September figures.

Social Security for teachers and other employees of the jointure will be retroactive to January 1956, with contributions from School Board and individual employees due shortly.

What Others Say . . .

ZONING CAN DEGENERATE

Ever since World War II, this country has been a battleground between the home builders and the zoners. The battle lines have been thrown into disarray by a ruling of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court that it is unconstitutional for a community to require a one-acre-minimum building-lot size, with a 150-foot frontage on a street.

"A zoning ordinance in a residential district," said the court, "which makes it financially impossible for the vast majority of our young married couples or for people of medium incomes to purchase or own a home in that district is contrary to our nation's ideals of liberty and private opportunity."

"Where the zoning ordinance is not . . . reasonable and clearly necessary for the health, safety or morals of that community, it is unconstitutional."

Never before has any important court so explicitly limited what zoning boards can do under the police power. Fifteen years ago, in a case often cited as a precedent, the Massachusetts Supreme Court approved a one-acre-minimum lot size, citing the "health-promoting features and amenities" of that sort of restriction. Since then, courts have gone much farther.

Until the Supreme Court speaks with finality, the legal status of zoning is going to be confused. The Zoning Digest, which tries to keep up with the major decisions in the field, reports contradictory court rulings in almost every issue. Minimum lot sizes are only one of the problems involved. The whole field of zoning, from restrictions against home trailers to variances for industries in residential areas, seems to have everyone baffled.

Most reasonable people believe that zoning and planning are essentials for any self-respecting community. The city which does not segregate its industries and business from its homes is going to have a mess on its hands. The suburban town which lets itself be inundated by new housing developments, without regard to water, sewer, street, sidewalk, school and other considerations, is going to wake up sorry some morning.

What worries some people is the tendency of the planners avidly to extend their scope of operations. The purpose of planning and zoning is supposedly "to protect the public health, safety and general welfare." But when the "general welfare" is

Fellowship Hears Talk On Racial Relations

Christian Women's Fellowship enjoyed a Christmas program and refreshments at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Charles H. Frick, Huntsville Christian Church, Tuesday evening. Mrs. Earl Griffen and Mrs. Harold Phoenix, at the invitation of Elma Major, came from Wilkes-Barre to speak on racial relations. The group accompanied a tape recording of the choir's singing of Christmas carols. Mrs. Walter Covert presided, and Mrs. Jack Roberts and Mildred Major poured. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Covert and Mrs. Milton Culp.

Present other than those mentioned were: Rev. Frick, Milton Culp, Mesdames William Eckert, Marcus Ide, Frances Culp, Kenneth Brobst, Percy Wagner, Ralph Eipper, Miss Addie Elston.

interpreted to mean that a person has to buy five acres if he wants to build a house, something is wrong.

Zoning should be a means of promoting the "health, safety and general welfare" of society. It should not be a tool used by a few theorists who want to enforce their pet ideas on everybody else or to deny to many citizens the opportunity to live in a congenial environment.

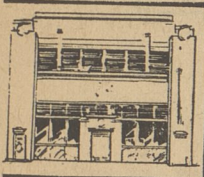

—From the Saturday Evening Post, December 7, 1957.
