Dallas Area Grade Schools Prepare For Annual Spring Work Exhibits

Children in Dallas Area Grade Schools are working hard to finish project books and pictures of spring before next week's exhibitions, when blackboards will bloom with gay pictures, and desks and work tables will show how modern education brings out individuality and enlists interest.

Exhibits will demonstrate how children are taught to read, write, add, spell, and is developed around a unit of work.

Through art activities and art media the pupil expresses honestly his own ideas, feelings, and experiences in his own way. In arithmetic and in spelling it is desirable for each child to get the same answer. However, the "right" answer in the art class is when every child comes out with a different answer. This is why a row of identical cut-paper daffodils on the bulletin board is not the best answer to an art lesson on the subject of spring. Mrs. Dorothy T. Withey is supervisor of art.

Below are the exhibit dates for three schools and the lesson units portrayed in each classroom. Exhibits are in the evening.

Little Cindy Brobst Dies At Hospital

Little Cindy Ruth Brobst, fifteen months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Brobst, Dallas, died Thursday afternoon in the Children's Hospital in Philadelphia. She was buried in Memorial Shrine Monday afternoon, Rev. Charles Frick conducting services from the funeral home at 672 Memorial Highway. Arrangements were by Bronson.

Mr. and Mrs. Brobst never expected Cindy to live beyond infancy. When she was about two months old, a remarkable operation was performed, with insertion of a valve to siphon off excess fluid from her brain. This operation was similar to one described two years ago in the Reader's Digest. Little Cindy developed an enlarged heart, and at times required hospitalization and oxygen. Four days before her death she was admitted to the Philadelphia hospital for observation and treatment. Physicians had given no real hope to the parents. Death would be almost inevitable, they had been told from the beginning.

Surviving in addition to the parents is a sister, Sharon, nine years old.

Fallbearers were young boys: Donald and Richard Stroud, Thomas Hops, and Gerald Wagner.
