ONLY 132 COVERED WOODEN BRIDGES ON STATE ROADS
The number of covered wooden bridges on the State Highway System declined by 10 during the past two years and there are now 132 State-maintained covered wooden bridges, Secretary of Highways Lewis M. Stevens reports.
These are in addition to covered bridges on roads not a part of the State system. Those bridges are maintained by counties or other political subdivisions.
Greene County in the Commonwealth's southwest corner continues to have the largest number of the picturesque spans, 20. Bedford and Columbia Counties share second place with 14 covered bridges each. Lancaster County has 12 and Adams County 11.
Of the 10 removed in the past two years, three were in Columbia County, two in Lancaster County, and one each in Chester, Juniata, Lycoming, Somerset and Washington Counties.
Two were removed during 1957 and eight during 1956.
Since the end of the Second World War, there have been as many as 359 covered wooden bridges on the State system, but normal replacement and natural disasters have claimed nearly two-thirds of them.
According to Department of Highways' records, the oldest covered wooden bridge on the State system was constructed in 1834 over the Talpehooken Creek between Spring and Bern Townships in Berks County. It has a span of 141 feet and has a posted capacity of five tons.
Longest covered wooden bridge on the State system is the one over Conodoginet Creek in Hampden Township, Cumberland County. Its two spans cover 318 feet. Erected in 1893, the bridge has a posted capacity of seven tons.
Only two bridges are posted to carry up to 15 tons. One is in Indiana County and the other in Perry County. Two, one in Adams County and one between Cumberland and York Counties, are posted for weights as high as 10 tons.
The Department of Highways never has constructed a covered wooden bridge. They became part of the State Highway system through a series of enactments by the General
