When I delivered my news on the Saturday before Christmas, I walked into the office of the Dallas Post hoping to visit and see for the first time some of the friends I know through writing but have never met. It was just my luck that the editor, Mr. Risley, was in the front office. I also met some others. After visiting a while, Mr. Risley gave me a Christmas gift which I never expected. I left the office wondering what was in the box I held in my arms. When I reached the car, I hurriedly tore off the paper; it was a delicious box of miniature chocolates which my family and I enjoyed very much. Thank you very much.
