Passion Play In The Black Hills Is High Point Of Trip To Coast

The Passion Play, as presented at Spearfish, near Mt. Rushmore in the Black Hills of Dakota, was one of the most enthralling spectacles of the entire transcontinental round trip, according to Lester Squier, who returned to Lehman on Thursday from the national PSEA convention, to which he was a delegate in late June from the Northeastern District of Pennsylvania.

He described the setting: a street scene in Jerusalem, with a shepherd and his flock; the women drawing water from the well; the padding camels; the triumphant entry of Jesus; the palms and the hosannas. The Garden of Gethsemane; the betrayal; the trial before Pontius Pilate. The labored march to Golgotha. The crucifixion, high on a hill.

Gilberts Hear From Dottie In Rhodesia

Dottie Gilbert, writing July 15 to Rev. and Mrs. Charles Gilbert from Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, says: "Just a note to let you know the U.S. government flew us down here yesterday because of the Congo situation. We thought it perfectly silly and it was horrible saying goodbye to our African friends. We promised we'd be back in a few weeks as soon as it gets quiet. We told them we weren't running away from fear, but had to obey our government. I wrote a six-page letter at Katakomb, where we went thinking we were going to conference, and at the last minute I forgot it in a book I had to leave because of weight. I'm assigned to Mutambara and have a lot of things to take care of... consul, money, etc, so must quit. I trust the State Department, or Board, are notifying you of my safety. I guess you will think your tax money well spent this year. I promise a book in the mail soon."
