Father And Son See Their Students Take Star Farmer Degree At Show

Students of father and son teachers of vocational agriculture won honors last Wednesday at the Pennsylvania State Farm Show in Harrisburg.

Ray F. Henney, Kunkle, teacher at Elk Lake Joint High School in Susquehanna County, and his son, Robert C. Henney, teacher at Warwick Union High School at Lititz, Lancaster County, saw their students obtain the highest degree, that of Star Farmer.

Paul J. Schuler, Elk Lake, took the degree for Region I, representing Wyoming and Susquehanna Counties.

James C. Brubaker, Warwick Union, took the degree for Region II, representing Lancaster and York Counties.

Both boys are now eligible to compete for the American Star Farmer degree at the International Livestock Show in Kansas City.

To qualify for the degree of Star Farmer, a student must show exceptional scholarship, leadership, and farm management.

Ray, whose wife, Dorothy, teaches at Dallas Township, has been at Elk Lake fourteen years. Prior to going to Elk Lake, he taught at the Lake-ton school. In 1953 he was awarded Honorary Keystone Farmer degree at the Farm Show. He is a graduate of Wilkes-Barre High School, now Coughlin, and of Pennsylvania State University.

Robert is a graduate of Dallas Township schools and Pennsylvania State University. This is his fifth year at Lititz, a position he accepted immediately upon graduation from college.

He is in partnership operating a farm which raises beef cattle, hogs and tobacco at Lititz.

His dad maintains a fine flock of sheep at Kunkle. Other projects are strawberry culture and general farming. The farm pond is well stocked with fish. Ray says having a farm pond helps conservation of water and soil, as well as providing pleasure and a fish crop.
