No Peeping, Please, Mr. Garroway; A Lady Must Preserve Her Privacy

By MRS. CARLETON JONES
Editorial note: A short time ago, Mrs. Carleton Jones, Glen Summit, a friend of long standing of the Dallas Post, was asked to express her views on the subject of Television. Here is what she wrote:

Six years ago, when I was seventy-five years old, I had an illness that so damaged my heart that it became necessary for me to change my mode of living, from physical activities to a quiet life within my own home.

The adjustment was not too difficult, due to the thoughtful devotion of my family and friends, and the fact that I had occupational resources dependent upon my head and hands, not my feet. I live alone in a home set high on a hill, and I can see almost as far as the eye can reach. There is beauty always in the mountains. But in spite of my interesting occupations, there were many hours that had to be provided for to avoid boredom.

My family urged me to get a television set, but I was not interested. My conceit was appalling. But to comfort my truly sympathetic children, I condescendingly capitulated. The set was installed in my big bedroom, with a stationary antenna on my upper porch. The smiling T-V man said, "Boy, if you ever want to sell this house, just say you have perfect reception."

There sat the ugly monster on my precious flat-top maple desk, where I could see it even from my bed. I hated the sight of it, but curiosity conquered, and I started to turn the dial. I woke up early, and at seven o'clock one morning I tuned in on the "Today Show." I was captivated by the program of news and interviews; but above all by the mysterious and potent fervor of the T-V to project personalities, to emphasize sincerity, and to disclose the reverse.

My Monster became a valuable window through which I was able to see beyond my environment. Tuning in each morning to the "Today Show" became a habit. It wasn't easy to get dressed in front of the penetrating eyes of Mr. Dave Garroway, but by making a sort of a tent of my voluminous "granny" gown, I managed to get into my clothes without indecent exposure. Now my days begin with this early morning program, and I progress through the hours by watching carefully chosen programs. I am instructed, entertained, and even inspired. There is the stimulating element of the unexpected, and I welcome into my home many persons, even though they do not know me.

I select my programs carefully, just as my books and the piano music I play. I am an enthusiast about sports, and revel in my ability to watch them in comfort. It is quite different to lounge in a welcoming, upholstered chair to see a favorite sport, from parking one's anatomy on a cushionless seat for several hours.

My friend T-V is never allowed to supersede my enjoyment of human contacts. When my other friends come to see me, the pleasure of their companionship obliterates my interest in the set.

As for the commercials! Bless you, they pay the bills for all the inestimable value of the programs I select. And I do not look a gift horse in the mouth, even when it says, "Look, Mom, no cavities!"

Have You Seen A Collie?

A smooth-haired collie, black and white, with white neck ruff, white spot on the back, and a tan face, is missing from the Kintzer home at Demunds. Laddie is ten months old, pet of Lauren Kintzer, who is desolate at his loss. He was wearing a red collar when he disappeared ten days ago. Mrs. Kintzer is advertising in the Trading Post. ## Civil Defense Fall-Out Shelter Ready For Inspection At Wilkes Luzerne County Civil Defense, has recently completed construction and stockpiling of a Model Family-type Fallout Shelter at Wilkes College, located in the basement of Sterling Hall, 72 South River Street.

We do not anticipate nor desire war but, as long as city-destroying weapons exist, we must devise the best means possible for protection, should this nation be attacked.

Protection from fallout will be necessary in the event of a nuclear war. Fallout from atomic explosions in distant cities, as far away as Chicago, Illinois, would create a serious problem for the residents of Luzerne County.

The shelter will be open for inspection each weekday, Wednesday through Saturday, between the hours of 2 and 5 in the afternoon, when an attendant will be on duty to answer questions. If an organization desires to make a tour as a group, at times other than visiting hours on regular days, including evenings and Sundays, this will be possible through the Civil Defense Control Center at Luzerne County Court House.

Frank Townsend, County Director, urges all Luzerne County residents to visit the shelter at their earliest convenience. Here is an excellent opportunity to learn what is necessary for home protection and to see how easily it can be adapted.

Survey Started On Hunting And Fishing In The Nation

A month-long survey on fishing and hunting started on Monday, a project of the Census Bureau to determine the number of individuals who engaged in recreational hunting and fishing in the United States during 1961, their expenditures, and the number of days spent.

Carl Stainbrook, queried on the survey, said he had no information, that it was not in the hands of the Game Commission; but that hunting and fishing are both big business, bringing in a great deal of revenue for hotels and restaurants as well as hardware stores; in addition to fringe benefits for service stations.

A similar survey, taken early in 1956, showed that approximately 25 million American anglers and hunters spent nearly $3 billion in pursuit of fish and game during 1955. This averages $114 apiece. The 21 million anglers spent $2 billion while 12 million hunters spent nearly $1 billion. More than seven million individuals engaged in both hunting and fishing.

The fishing and hunting survey is being carried out by the Census Bureau for the Fish and Wildlife Service, U. S. Department of the Interior.
