Is It Out Of This World?

Is it a desert in Arizona? A jungle scene in the Amazon? A wild approach to the mountains of Thibet? Weird formations far beneath the sea? A winter landscape somewhere in the Back Mountain? We publish the answer next week. Photo by Kozemchak

Birth's Service Station Now Part Of Motor Club's 2-Way Radio Set-Up

Clyde Birth's Dallas Esso station, in cooperation with the Wyoming Valley Motor Club, is now providing expedient road service through the AAA Club's newly organized two-way radio network of service stations.

Automobile Club members needing first aid for their vehicles in the Dallas area will get the full advantage of the modernizing program when they call the Club for help. As soon as the radio dispatchers get the distress call at Club headquarters, they call the proper radio-controlled service truck and send it to the scene of trouble. Birth's station is the fifth in the Motor Club's network.

Birth claims that the new system has already saved miles of unnecessary travel in giving service to stranded motorists, since the driver of the radio truck never has to return to the station for further orders, as the Club can keep him on the road to best advantage. He further stated that the radio operation takes the pressure off his station employees, since AAA members can now call the Motor Club directly, where the control unit is located, by using the toll-free telephone number, Enterprise 2-0573.

Wyoming Valley Motor Club joins 45 other clubs in the operation of 76 land stations using radio for their Emergency Road Service systems. In addition to the benefits of two-way radio to the garage, the Club, and the members, the general motoring public also benefits because of the ability of the Club to promptly remove traffic hazards caused by disabled vehicles.

AAA clubs using two-way radio are dispatching service calls to some 1,700 vehicles. In 1960, they dispatched over three million calls by radio.

Safety Valve

Dear Editor:

With all the talk going to unemployment; help to bring jobs here to this area, etc., why don't the local communities put some of the loafing, gold bricking shovel artists to work cleaning the snow from the streets in the various towns.

Pittston is a shining example while none are to be omitted.

The streets are lined with men who know little but shovelling and not a decent parking place in sight. The parking problem was always bad, now it is almost impossible. This area is sick.

Should the town fathers give those on the relief rolls a chance to earn and pay off back taxes by crediting instead of giving cash?

Who in their right mind would move a business into a dirty—ill-kept—mishmanaged community where thousands of jobs are being stumbled over and wallowed in every day—with no one doing anything about it?

It Pays To Advertise,
And A Story Helps

Happy landings for the lost collie who rated not only an ad in the Trading Post last week, but a news-story. Mrs. Lawrence Kintzer, Demunds, had dozens of calls after the news story appeared, one from as far away as Luzerne. It was the red collar mentioned in the story that identified Laddie.

Laddie, ten months old, had been taken in by Ed Moore, East Dallas, and been given the run of the house. Mr. and Mrs. Moore both work, so a few days later they regretfully took the dog to Ed's mother, Mrs. Raymond Moore, to await the call of the Humane Association truck.

Miss Carlin lives next door to Mrs. Moore, and she recognized the Kintzer dog at once. The Kintzers are the folks who had four kids all in one package last spring, establishing goat history.
