

Westmoreland Graduating Class Will Enjoy Party In Poconos

A Westmoreland High School Graduation Party will be held at High Point Inn at Mt. Pocono Monday, June 12, from the hour of arrival after graduation, Monday night, until 7 A.M. Tuesday. Seniors and their guests will have a police escorted caravan of cars from the High School to High Point Inn. A committee of Senior parents will act as hosts and hostesses and will be on the premises the full time.

The High Point Inn will offer the following schedule of entertainment for the class:—The use of facilities on two lobby floors; Unlimited use of an indoor swimming pool; a band for dancing until 2:30 A.M., after which a juke box is available. A buffet will be served at midnight and an early breakfast, after which students will leave for home. No police escort will be furnished for the return trip.

Senior parents from the Parent Teacher's Council have planned the affair and will sponsor a "Sports Night" event April 8 at the Junior High School to help finance the party. Everyone is invited to help support the class and to attend.

GIVE US BARABBAS was a stirring, inspiring play, an ideal Palm Sunday offering that does credit to all those concerned.

Playwright Henry Denker succeeded admirably in making the shadowy figure of Barabbas, the thief and murderer really come to life, bold, boastful, vain and lusty, but with an innate integrity and intelligence that sent him searching for the truth and gave him a mission in life, at last.

James Daly, heading the cast in the title role, gave a superb performance. Dennis King was excellent in his role of an irresolute and troubled Pilate.

One truly distinguished television production such as this makes television the marvelous medium it is in spite of all the countless poor shows.

ROBERT YOUNG gets a new show next season. He is finished with the father role, except for the repeats of "Father Knows Best" which will be around for some time.

His new show is titled "Window on Main Street" in which Mr. Young will play a novelist living in and writing books about people in a small town.

PAULINE FREDERICK'S career began in Junior High School in Harrisburg, Pa., when she reported school and social events for the local newspapers.

The Gallitzin, Pa., born young lady, when in American University, decided to become a member of the bar. While studying international law in Graduate School, a history professor suggested that she abandon a legal career and try her hand at interviewing the Wives of diplomats, with the result that a Washington newspaper immediately ordered a weekly series.

This was the real beginning for Pauline who later was to cover the Nuremberg Trials; meeting of the Big Four Foreign Ministers in New York and Paris, Alger Hiss and the Berlin Airlift and many other global stories.

Although all news is her beat, Pauline specializes in foreign affairs.

ROBERT CUMMINGS has an interesting background. He was born June 19, 1910, the son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Clarence Cummings. He was named Charles Clarence Robert Orville Cummings. The Orville was for Orville Wright, the pioneer aviator. Cummings began learning to fly in his early teens.

He attended the School of Mechanical Engineering at Carnegie Institute of Technology. After his father's death, Cummings, who had become interested in college dramatics, enrolled at the American Academy of Dramatic Art in New York but had to leave after six months, to earn his living.

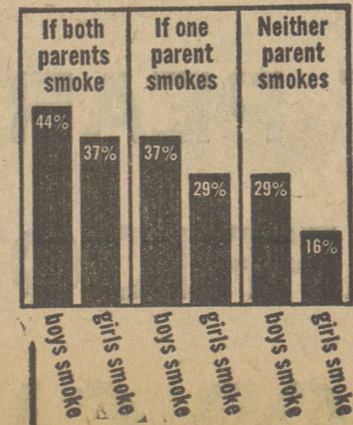

He spent his day going the rounds of the theatrical agencies and worked at night as a delicatessen delivery boy, as an elevator boy, as a switchboard operator. Over six feet tall, well built, dark haired and handsome, he got nowhere in his search for a stage role. Broadway was under-going a British cycle at the time, so Cummings decided to acquire a British accent. He scrapped enough money for passage money and sailed for England. He studied accents by cycling around the country. He had his picture taken under the marquee of an English theater where a bribed porter had put up in temporary lights "Blade Stanhope Conway in Shaw's 'Candida.'"

As Blade Stanhope Conway he returned to New York with an Oxford accent and got a stage role immediately. Then he heard that a real Texan was being sought for a movie so he became Brice Hutchens from Texas. He made several pictures before becoming Robert Cummings again.

John F. Kennedy, President:

"In the present troubled world, we cannot be a peacemaker if we are not also the protector of those individuals as well as nations who cast with us their personal liberty and hopes for the future."

A former Wyoming Valley man who was active in the chemical business for more than 50 years is looking for companions with whom he can play chess.

He is B. F. Merrell, 93, and his home is at 121 Doran Drive, Trucksville.

During good weather on the last three days of the week, he can be found at Floyd Wells Barber Shop in Trucksville where he challenges all comers.

Former head of the Leader Chemical Company in Wilkes-Barre, Mr. Merrell is the father of Ruth Merrell, instructor in the science department at Meyers High School. His son, William, is a college professor.

Until a few years ago when he had an unfortunate accident at a Shavertown intersection, Mr. Merrell drove his own car and was able frequently to visit Wilkes-Barre YMCA where he took part in chess competition.

If you don't know how to play he will even be glad to teach you. Even at his advanced age, Mr. Merrell is sharp as a whistle and follows the markets daily with interest.

Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God.
