New Exchange Has 800 Lines

Work Progresses On Truckville Exchange

Work is moving along on the cellar and foundation for the new Commonwealth Telephone Company building on Lewis Street in Truckville, just off Harris Hill Road.

The new brick structure will be an unattended office accommodating 800 lines to take care of present and future growth in that area.

The 30½x40 foot building will be of attractive design and will be larger than the one now in use at Harveys Lake. Size will be comparable with similar Commonwealth offices in Millersville and Penn Argyle.

From telephone subscribers point of view, the new office will result in some rate reductions for private and business lines as well as some party lines since they will no longer have to pay mileage charges from the Dallas central office.

The new office will eliminate the need for new and larger cables from the central office in Dallas to Truckville.

Local advertisers agree that newspaper advertising pays off more than other medium. Last year they invested over 3 times as much money in newspapers as in all other measured media combined.
