

High School Economics May Be Required Study

Superintendent of Public Instruction Dr. Charles H. Boehm this week announced that he expects the State Council of Education to require all Pennsylvania high school students to study economics.

This prediction was made at an organizational meeting of the Pennsylvania Council of Economic Education in Harrisburg.

The superintendent stated that all secondary school graduates in Pennsylvania should have at least 36 hours of instruction in the nation's economic system as part of the prescribed social studies courses.

"Few aspects of the American way have been so ignored in the schools as the system by which our economy operates," Dr. Boehm said.

"One of the reasons is that economics is still considered to be a highly controversial subject by many educators, because it is at the heart of many conflicting national issues."

Visit Scenic, Historic Pennsylvania Weekend Travel Suggestions

These lazy summer weekends afford the perfect opportunity to get acquainted with scenic and historic Pennsylvania. The only equipment needed is a heaping picnic basket and a trusty road map.

GETTYSBURG AREA

Be you either amateur historian or nature lover this 125 mile tour including Gettysburg, Kittatinny Mountain, Cashtown and Carlisle, will interest you. Routing begins in Harrisburg at Walnut Street Bridge at Front Street, Atlanta, or Taylor Bridge and is mapped as follows:

0. Miles at Susquehanna River. Robert E. Lee planned to destroy the bridge over the river and capture Harrisburg. After that, he expected to choose Philadelphia, Baltimore or Washington as his next target. Drive west on U. S. 11, the Carlisle Pike.

18m. CARLISLE, a town rich in history and warfare, at the foot of the Appalachian Mountains. Molly Pitcher, the Revolutionary War heroine, is buried in an old graveyard on South Street. Visit CARLISLE BARRACKS, established 200 years ago by the British. Later it became the Carlisle Indian School, attended by Jim Thorpe, one of America's all-time athletic heroes. Another outstanding point of interest is Dickinson College; its oldest building, West Hall, was designed by Benjamin Latrobe, architect of the Capitol in Washington.

Before the Civil War, Carlisle was an active station on the underground railroad, which moved slaves into the North. During the Confederate invasion of 1863, 500 cavalrymen took the city. It was the closest they ever got to Harrisburg. But three days later they went to Lee's aid at Gettysburg. Continue south-west on U.S. 11.

50m. CHAMBERSBURG, is the fertile Cumberland Valley, on the east flank of KITTATINNY MOUNTAIN. It was occupied three times by Southern forces during the Civil War. The last time, in 1864, they burned it to the ground. Before the War, John Brown established headquarters here before his daring raid at Harpers Ferry. Robert E. Lee established headquarters in Chambersburg and moved East across the mountains to Cashtown. Turn on Route 30 and follow his course.

60m. CALEDONIA STATE PARK, a beautiful historic and scenic area. It contains the remains of an old charcoal furnace and blacksmith shop, owned by Thaddeus Stevens, staunch foe of slavery in Congress. On their march to Gettysburg, the Confederates partially destroyed the furnace. The State Park has fine picnicking, camping, golfing, swimming, and scenic drives.

If you have the time and enjoy travel off the main routes, drive nine miles South to MONT ALTO, location of the Pennsylvania State College School of Forestry and Mont Alto State Park, where picnic tables are bordered with white pine, oak, maple and beech trees.

67m. CASHTOWN. With the Union Army close at hand, Lee planned to establish his battle position here, ordering his troops from Carlisle and York to this point.

75m. GETTYSBURG. At McPherson Ridge, on the western edge of town, the bloody three-day battle began on July 1, 1863. Starting at this point, from the cannon that fired the opening shot, you can drive the 26-mile route (or part of it) through the NATIONAL MILITARY PARK, with 2390 monuments, tablets and markers recounting deeds of heroism and valor on both sides. You can stand where Lincoln later delivered his immortal address.

Drive first to the ETERNAL LIGHT PEACE MEMORIAL, at the scene of the first's day's action, when the Confederates scored heavily, then along Seminary Ridge, with many Southern cannon still in place. Climb the Lookout Tower for a bird's-eye view of former President Eisenhower's 500-acre farm. Then continue through the Peach Orchard, scene of heavy fighting the second day, to Hancock Avenue, on the Union side. The stone wall called the Angle, or High Water Mark, was the crest of Pickett's Charge, when 15,000 Southerners streamed across the open field in a brave but futile attack. Enter the iron gateway to Soldier's National Cemetery, containing the graves of 3,700 dead, which President Lincoln dedicated four months after the battle with his Gettysburg Address.

Many other attractions in Gettysburg will hold your attention after you visit the battlefield. Drive East on State Route 116.

89 m. HANOVER. General Job Stuart and his daring Southern cavalry, racing to join Lee, were blocked for one day by Union Cavalry on the Streets of this town, June 30, 1863. Three miles south of Hanover on Littleton Pike is HANOVER SHOE FARMS, the famous harness horse breeding farm where trotting champions are raised and where visitors are welcome.

Then return to Harrisburg, on Route 194. If the hour is still early, stop in at the PENNSYLVANIA STATE MUSEUM on Capitol Hill to see the famous painting of the Battle of Gettysburg, one of the largest murals in the world, with life-size figures. You and your youngsters will recognize many of the scenes from your day's tour of the battlefield. You will share the memories of your 125-mile journey through the pages of history.

NEARER HOME, EAGLES MERE
For those of you who want to get out from behind the wheel and enjoy a weekend of fun and relaxation travel to Eagles Mere, it is one of the best mountain resorts in the East. From Dallas follow Route 118, then highway 42 right to Eagles Mere. A weekend of swimming, boating and athletic programs is in the offering. The famous Eagles Mere Summer Theater, training ground of many famous theatrical stars, offers ten top-flight drama presentations from July 5 to September 2. Make pleasant use of spare time, see Pennsylvania.
