

Good Pie-Makers Prepare For Church Auction

Here are Mrs. Curtis Edwards and Mrs. Fred Dymond, Jr., working top speed in the kitchen of Center Moreland Methodist Church, trimming excess crust from a brace of fruit pies.

In preparation for the Center Moreland Auction and Barbecue tomorrow and Saturday on the grounds of the Center Moreland

Methodist Church, women of the church are now in the process of baking 350 fruit pies for dessert, cleaning 1000 three-pound chickens, and completing the many other details involved in preparing to serve 2,000 dinners. Their menu includes half a barbecued chicken, baked potatoes, string beans, corn on the cob, cabbage salad, rolls, pie and coffee. The meal will be served on an "all you can eat" basis both Friday and Saturday from 4 to 8 p. m.

Shavertown Acme is furnishing facilities for cleaning and storing of chickens as its contribution to the church auction and barbecue.

Immediately following the dinner on both nights an auction of new and used merchandise is held. Merchants from the area have contributed many new items including floor waxers, adding machines, luggage, lamps, house paint, ovenware, plumbing fixtures, kitchen equipment, rugs, carpets, cosmetics, toys, and games, dishes, household supplies, clothing, shoes, blankets, motor oil lawn furniture, electric frying pans, play pens, automotive equipment, sand, gravel, ready-mix concrete, and many other items.

There will also be a large quantity of second-hand furniture, household items, and an antique three-seat sleigh. Also on sale will be small goods of all kinds including home-made baked goods, dolls, aprons, and flower arrangements.

Over 150 members of the church are serving on 26 different committees in order that a successful Auction and Barbecue may further reduce the debt incurred in the recent project of rebuilding the church. Over half of the cost has been given or pledged by the people, but the remainder must be raised through the Annual Auction and Barbecue.

George Jacobs, Jr., Well Adjusted In Philippines, Studying Spanish

Reports from George Jacobs, studying on a foreign exchange student program at University of the Philippines, are that things are different over there.

For six weeks, a student concentrating on one subject, George is living, breathing, eating, the Spanish language, to the exclusion of all other studies. He started behind the eight ball, as the term began June 2, and he did not arrive in Quezon City until June 18. He left here June 14, crossing the international date line somewhere between Alaska and Tokyo.

The trip across the world by plane took him to Seattle, to Anchorage, to Tokyo, to the island of Luzon. He spent two days and three nights in Tokyo, succeeding in losing his Westmoreland Year-Book in a taxi on the way to the airport en route to the Philippines. (Mrs. Prothero rounded up another book for him, but it is minus the priceless messages from his classmates.)

Baggage is limited to 44 pounds, but a passenger is permitted to carry a book and a camera. George's book was the Year-Book instead of the customary whodunit.

George has already done quite a bit of traveling to spots of interest, including a fascinating tour of a coconut plantation. Folks are eager to show him about, and through speaking engagements with organizations, he has made productive contacts.

Arrangements are that a foreign student changes his home at the end of each term to provide him with as much source as possible on native customs and atmosphere. George has just moved, regretting the loss of his "family" but already completely at ease in his new surroundings.

He already belongs to two student organizations. Students from other lands band together to arrange sight-seeing tours, to gain as much knowledge as possible during their year
