Area Music Lovers Swell Total Of Theatre 3's Subscriptions

ARTHUR FIEDLER

The Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, pictured above, is a world famed ensemble of 23 pieces. Conductor Szymon Goldberg is a violinist of note who performs as soloist for the group.

Theatre 3 committees are turning in a record number of subscriptions, according to Frank Slaff, general chairman. Although the campaign was launched only a few weeks ago, Slaff predicts a box office sell-out by the middle of September.

Especially gratifying to Slaff and committee members, he reports, is the support of Benefactors of the College, a $100 tax exempt category. These donors receive two reserved seat tickets to each performance of Theatre 3, as well as invitations to all cultural affairs of the College.

Theatre 3 opens October 2 with the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, followed by the Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company November 13, and the ever popular Boston Pops Tour Orchestra on February 9.

Founded in Holland in 1955, the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra rapidly achieved success in concert halls of Europe. This is its first American Tour, which will take it to 40 principle cities. No stranger to American music lovers, the NCO recordings by Epic preceded the group to the United States.

The program October 2 will be composed of Baroque and Modern compositions, the specialty of the group.

Unique even for Theatre 3, which specializes in the unusual and the best, is the Bayanihan Philippine Dance Company. The young dancers and musicians present 26 separate folk dances reflecting the racial and cultural life of the Islands with sustained grace and precision.

The Bayanihan appeared briefly in America on a private tour, and were enthusiastically received wherever they played. The current tour constitutes their first major appearance here; they will appear in 60 major cities across the nation.

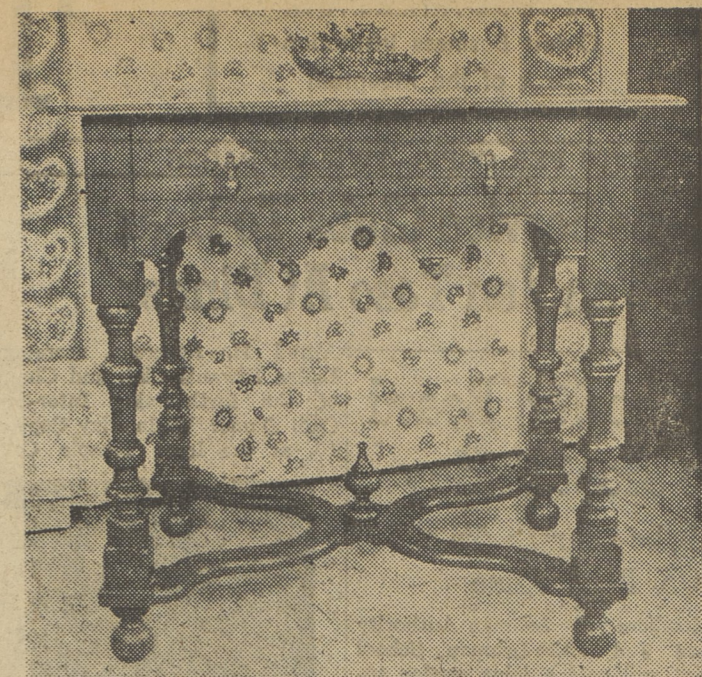

Critics have been loud in their praise of the Bayanihan dancers. "Completely engrossing! Exhilarating to watch"; "Exciting!"; "Eye ravishing!" are some of the exclamations. Newsweek magazine (October 26, 1959) had this to say: Compared with this engaging, graceful, and disciplined group, the dancers in the brightest Broadway musicals seem pale indeed."

For millions of fans the world over, the Boston Pops means light, classical music with the special flavor of Arthur Fiedler. Since 1952 Maestro Fiedler has brought to audiences live concerts via the Boston Pops Tour Orchestra; previously, audiences outside of Boston had to be content with radio and record performances.

The "vintage champagne music" of the Pops has been on the best selling list of records for 20 years. Such pieces as "Jalousie," "The Boston Tea Party," "Offenbach in America", and numerous waltzes, marches, polkas, operas, symphonies, and folk tunes, are loved by people the world over, as played by the world's most popular orchestra, the Boston Pops.

By popular request, the BPTO will appear as Theatre 3's final production, February 9.
