

Lake-Lehman High School

By MARY ANN LASKOWSKI

SENIOR PLAYS

One of the projects that is the most fun in Senior Year, is preparing for the class play.

TORCH CAMPAIGN

United Fund has distributed small contribution envelopes to the students.

COLOR PICTURES

All students from grades through Senior High had their pictures taken last week in color.

THANK YOU

I would like to thank the gentlemen who read in this column about our band drive and sent me a gift to go toward new band uniforms.

BOUNTY

Many high schools and colleges have a big bonfire before a college game. Our school is also going to have its first tonight at the Lehman Building.

FRIDAY, 13th:

What a date to have a dance. But this isn't holding back Lehman Juniors. They have planned this and arrangements are being carried out.

Cleff Tones. This dance is open to everyone. Dancing is from 8 to 11.

IN-DOOR SPORTS

With a few days of cold weather, already we want to stay indoors. One sign of this is, the boys want to start playing pre-season basketball.

EDUCATION

Students in high school sometimes do not appreciate how important education is. By statistics of the day, we all know that a person who has a good education makes a better home in the future.

In the Wilkes College Manual there is a summary of the marks of an educated man. Check it and see how you and your children measure up.

- (1) He seeks the truth. (2) He is able to communicate ideas. (3) He has faith in man. (4) He possesses vision. (5) He cultivates inner resources and spiritual strength. (6) He has ethical standards by which he lives. (7) He is aware of the human struggle for progress and comprehends the forces that have assured or jeopardized this progress. (8) He is conscious of his responsibility as a citizen, and participates constructively in the social, economic, and political life of the community.

Mary Jean Hennebaul

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hennebaul, Harveys Lake RD 1, announce the birth of a daughter September 23, 1961, at Nesbitt Hospital.

Old Peter Stauffer's Loom Work On Exhibition At Smithsonian

One thing leading to another, a discussion on whether a ledge of rock below the old cemetery at the top of Huntsville Road, bore or did not bear the impress of a fossil turtle, led to a bewildering number of places, including Hong Kong, Pekin, Australia, the Pentagon, and Moscow.

It was Mrs. Charles Hosler, Parrish Street, a fairly recent resident of Dallas, who started the whole thing. She called up to say that right under the cemetery there was a hollowed-out place in the rocky ledge, and that the ceiling of the small cave looked as if it might show the impress of a fossil turtle, at a little more than head height. She came around.

A discussion of geology led logically to a discussion of Indian arrow heads near Honeybrook; the interests displayed in such excavations by her father, herself, and her children; Chester County Day in the heart of the Amish Country; the travels of a globe-trotting meteorologist; a display of Pennsylvania Dutch weaving in the Smithsonian Institute; a series of adoptions; the Pentagon; pounds, shillings and pence in an old account book with phonetic spelling; the reservoir in Honeybrook, fed by eternal springs; and finally, full circle, the fossilized impress of a turtle.

"Look up there on that ledge, and see if you don't think the ceiling of the little cave has a turtle on it," she instructed.

Sure enough, there was a faint tracing of head, carapace, and legs. "Think those pieces of rock underneath might be the turtle itself?"

"Could be. Here's a chunk, might be the head." Mrs. Hosler put it carefully back in the cavern. "It better stay there until somebody who knows something about it can have a look."

"What I really came around to talk about," she had said earlier, "was Chester County Day."

She supplied copies of the annual publication, and of the Northern Chester County Herald.

The conversation slipped again. It now concerned Mrs. Hosler's grandfather, one Peter Stauffer, who once wove magnificent warm and durable wool coverlets which he sold for $1.50 apiece, figured early in his account books in pounds, shillings and pence. Following an old pattern book printed in German, he selected the star pattern as his favorite, and developed headspreads in red stars, blue stars, white stars, on his overshot loom.

One of his spreads, together with his silhouette, his ancient pattern book, and his yellowed account book, may be seen at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, displayed in a glass-fronted wall cabinet, on loan since 1955.

Peter Stauffer not only made woven coverlets of linen and wool, but sturdy linsey-woolsey weave garments. His loom fell prey to an article-cleaning spree of some good housekeeper, and the heavy side beams were thriftily used for rails for a fence. Bobbins and spools were thrown on the town dump. A pair of square steel-rimmed spectacles is still a family treasure.

Charles A. Stauffer, his son, became interested in digging for Indian relics at the site of the Honeybrook reservoir, where once Indians had camped near the never-falling springs. He dug up arrowheads, flint and jasper, and he infected his children with the virus. Mrs. Hosler can't keep away from museums. Her children are all museum-conscious.

She has a son, Charles Jr., who is a meteorologist, whose engagements take him all over the world, wherever eminent meteorologists gather.

At present he is in Moscow, hobnobbing with other scientists. His training was obtained at M. I. T. and Pennsylvania State University.

A daughter, Suzanne and her husband have adopted two children, moving to a new and larger home in Fairfax, Virginia, after taking on a third. When the adoption agency said, "We have a family of six children," Suzanne and her husband exchanged glances, and said happily, "We'll take them all." This was not to be, as other arrangements had been made for the older ones. Mrs. Mitchell has had kindergarten experience, and is now applying it at home.

Another daughter Barbara, has recently moved to West Suffield, Connecticut. She has four children, same as her brother, Charles.

Charles Sr. is with the Navy in the Post Office building in Wilkes-Barre. He and his wife both have so many hobbies that they have outgrown the small house on Parrish Street.

Hears McCutcheon

Kiwanis Club men and women held a combined meeting Wednesday night at Irem Country Club. Robert Maturi of the men's section, and Mrs. William Guyette, presided. Guest speaker was George McCutcheon, who talked on guidance. Delegates to Pennsylvania State Convention of Kiwanis in Wilkes-Barre were announced as Jerome R. Gardner, Alfred H. Ackerson, and Mr. Maturi. Alternates, Ray Goeringer, Andrew Roan, and Merrill Faegenburg.

Harry Lefko was announced as chairman of the Harvest Moon Ball scheduled for Saturday November 4 at Irem Country Club.

Dallas Senior High School News

Films

In a recent assembly, we saw two films. One was of the second astronaut sent into space. It was intitled "Summer in Space." It showed the preparations for his flight and the take-off and the tense moment when the helicopter had to drop the capsule because of its weight.

The other was on the Berlin crisis; how it came about and how serious it is now. It showed Hitler on a few of his triumphant trips through the capital, and also today's views of Berlin through the barbed wire separating East and West Berlin.

Senior Play Cast

The cast for the Senior play "Strictly Formal" has been chosen. They are Sally Moyer, Judy Williams, Elfrieda Hefft, Susan Dorrance, Carol Anderson, Marlin Rimple, Sandra Ambrose, Bob Peterson, Barry Slocum, Barbara Tag, Gale Graves, Dale Mosier, Glenda Williams, George Apaliski, Barbara Hilldebrand and Bernard Phillips. Under the direction of Mr. Hughes, Senior advisor, it will be presented Friday, November 17. It will be both an honor and a privilege to perform on the beautiful new stage making it something worth remembering for all involved.

Key Club Cider Drive

Key Club held its Cider Drive Friday and Saturday. They collected jugs Wednesday and Thursday and cleaned them. On Friday night they took the apples to Hardisky's Cider Press to make the cider.

We are very glad to hear that the fellows did so well in the drive. Magazine Drive Barry Slocum is head of the drive and we are sure that he will do a fine job. Sell Quickly Through The Trading Post
