Kiwanis Club Hears Bigelow On Hi-Ways

Clifford Bigelow, executive director of Wyoming Valley Motor Club spoke to Dallas Kiwanis Club Wednesday evening, about the Interstate Highway system. By 1975, he said, the Federal Government hopes to have the system completed. Wilkes-Barre, the hub of the Eastern segment, is well situated, said Mr. Bigelow, for economic growth. Proposed changes in the Luzerne-Dallas highway were also discussed.

President Robert Maturi introduced guests: Clarence Smith, superintendent of County highways; Paul Daily, Donald Faegenburg, and Thomas Budinger.

Marilyn Eck Meets Baby Elephant Head-On As Car Encounters Herd

Marilyn Eck, Rotary exchange student in Africa, writes that elephants, hyenas and buffalo are getting to be old stuff to her since taking a trip to the Big Game country in Bechuana-land.

Home-nursing students at Dallas High School will be enthralled with her experience in tending an injured patient under primitive conditions.

Victoria Falls must have been out of this world. Loads more fascinating stuff to come from Marilyn, but not in this issue. Watch for it.

This letter is hurried and short because I was just told that a woman who lives down the river is going into civilization and can post it.

We arrived at the cottage last night, about 7:30. Actually the cottage is on the Chobe River which runs into the Zambezi. Also we are not in S. Rhodesia but in Bechuana-land. We crossed into N. Rhod; then back to S. Rhod; then into Bechuana. Right across the river is East Africa so I'll get there before we leave.

We stopped in Victoria Falls on the way up. Niagara looks like rapids compared to this. They are absolutely gorgeous and, best of all, not commercialized. The only buildings around are native huts. I bought Julie's Christmas present from one of the natives. What a riot. Three natives and I haggled for 15 minutes over the price. Dr. Thompson thinks I got a bargain.

We reached big game country about dusk. We had already seen baboons, monkeys, buck. On the road we nearly hit a gorgeous black and white sable.

After we crossed into Bechuana on a real crazy ferry, we came to a screaming halt as a herd of elephants ambled the road in front of us. We sat there with elephants all around. The two girls were crying and holding onto me for dear life; Mrs. Thompson was keeping track of the elephants on our left. Dr. Thompson was debating whether or not to proceed and I was fuming because it was too dark to take pictures. A baby elephant came straight for us but luckily the mother pushed him away. We were driving through deep sand at the time and Dr. Thompson was hoping that the 4-wheel drive of the Land Rover would take us through the brush if the elephants charged. But they didn't. We beat it out of there and then passed 6 hyenas and 3 buffalo. All this happened in the 12 mile drive from the border to the cottage! Thompson's said they hadn't seen so much game in their lives.

This morning when we got up there were elephant droppings and footprints all around the cottage and down by the river. What a dull, uninteresting place! (This is a joke, of course.)

It's so hot outside that I get a splitting headache with a hat and sun glasses on. We wear long-sleeved shirts and long pants to keep us from frying. Inside the cottage it's cool and comfortable. Although it's hot here, it's not humid. Another surprising thing is that the only insects I've seen are ants.

Africa's sunsets are gorgeous! And the flowers. Wild poinsettias grow everywhere; all sorts of palm trees, orange, lemon, banana, and tangelo trees grow uncultivated.

This afternoon we are going fishing for bream and tiger fish. If we don't catch any we don't eat—So-o-o. They guarantee that I'll catch plenty but, then again, they never saw me fish.

By the way, I didn't get any insurance for the plane trip because I had to take a bus to the airport and I got there just in time to board the plane. I tried to get some in Rome but couldn't—everything was closed up but one souvenir

The old judge was asked how it was that he could dispose of his cases with such remarkable speed. "I always listen to the plaintiff and then make my decision," he said.

"Never to the defendant?" "Well, I did at first. But I found it confused me."
