When times were good the get-rich-quickers and the better-your-Prosperity always lay just over the horizon. Fat, cheap land for all and your money back if everything wasn't just as represented.

It wasn't a bad gamble, either. The New Englanders lost the game, but by a narrow margin. Still, it was rainbow chasing, and the Rhode Islanders who took part would have been happier if they never had heard of the Susquehanna.

CONNECTICUT IDEA WHICH WENT WRONG You won't find much about the Susquehanna Purchase in the history books. It was one of those bad investments whose promoters preferred it should be forgotten. The scheme originated in Connecticut before the denizens of that ingenious State had learned to make nutmegs of wood.

Charles the Second and his advisers, who knew practically nothing about American geography, had given Connecticut in 1662 a charter under which it laid claim a hundred years later to a large chunk of what now is Pennsylvania. The alleged rights were to be sealed by purchase from the Indians and by settlement.

In 1754 negotiations were begun for buying from the Delaware Indians a huge stretch of wild scenery between the Delaware and Susquehanna rivers. It comprised the greater part of what now is Luzerne, Wyoming, Susquehanna and Wayne Counties and a part of Bradford.

The idea was that shares should be held by men of property and the lands sold to and settled by the little fellows. An organization of proprietors was effected, and district agents were named in Rhode Island.

Job Randall and Dr. Ephraim Bowen were appointed in Providence County, Beriah Brown, sheriff and political boss, in Kings, Isaac Tripp in Kent and Josias Lyndon in Newport. They were the high pressure boys as well as collectors of taxes and levies.

Investors with cash in their strong boxes fell like ripe fruit. In within Pennsylvania. It was to include most of the Purchase. There never was a chance of carrying the scheme through, but so stubborn was the Yankee resistance that at length in 1787 a compromise was reached which established the claims of the proprietors, but gave credits for other lands to settlers driven from their clearings.

As for the Rhode Island investors, we have seen notices of assessments, but none of dividend payments. You sometimes run across them in bundles of brittle old papers which once again we urge you to touch not, taste not, handle not.

One morning the old-time judge in a western mining camp opened court with the following announcement: "Gents, I have in hand a check—a bribe you might call it—from the plaintiff for $10,000 and another from the defendant for $15,000. I propose to return $5,000 to the defendant, and decide the case strictly on its merits."

Pennsylvania Game Commission released 315,59 ringneck pheasants this year; 15,410 quail; 6,536 wild turkeys; 11,858 mallard ducks, and 296 Canadian geese.

Who's Afraid Of Halloween Witches?

Here they are out Halloweening, neighborhood children asking for a hand-out, threatening sliver of soap in one hand, outspread paper bag in the other, the same little goblins that came to your door this past weekend. Unmasked, first row, Dean Hughes, Anne Crispell, Nancy, Danny and Jimmy Hughes. Second row, Barbara Hughes, Nancy Crispell, Allison Galletly, and Denise Gardner.

Norm Smith Runs Across Rhode Island's Slant On What Happened 200 Years Ago

Hi Howard and Myra: Thought you might be interested in this article my mother sent me. Have you been up to New England this summer? Spent the summer at a camp in Maine and when I returned found all my Dallas Posts waiting (made very interesting reading all at one time). Phillis and I want to say hello.

Connecticut Norm Smith

Editors Note: The clipping Norm forwarded is from the column "These Plantations" written by J. E. Clauson in 1929 for Rhode Island readers consumption. It follows:

Rambling through some aged-yellowed papers (which by the way are habit-forming and if you are haven't fallen leave them alone) we lighted on a phrase which hatched out a line of reflection. The phrase was Susquehanna Purchase; the reflections boiled down to the conclusion that the fathers of this fair patrimony were just as eager rainbow-chasers as any of their progeny of the present day down to and including 1961.

When times were good the get-rich-quickers and the better-your-Prosperity always lay just over the horizon. Fat, cheap land for all and your money back if everything wasn't just as represented.
