Joseph S. Kowaleski, 51, died Wednesday night of a heart attack at his home at Demunds. He was buried Saturday morning at St. John's Cemetery, following a Sol-lemn High Mass of Requiem celebrat-ed by Rev. Michael Rafferty, Rev. Francis A. Kane, and Rev. Richard Frank at Gate of Heaven Church. Services were conducted at 9:30 from the Williams Funeral Home. Holy Name Society recited the Rosary Friday evening.

Mr. Kowaleski, a native of Ashley, graduate of Ashley High School and a student at Kanty College, Mich-igan, operated a retail meat and grocery business in Wyoming for seven years; eleven years ago, after operating a store at Harveys Lake, he moved to Demunds Corners, where he owned and operated the Demunds Corners Hotel.

SCOUT TROOP 232

Plans were formulated at the Father's Smoker, Troop 232, St. Therese's Church, on Tuesday evening to assist John Butler, veteran scoutmaster, in continuing a worth-while scoutig program. Recognizing the importance of scouting in the wholesome development of a boy, "Mr. B." has been reluctant to re-fuse admittance to the troop with the results that the membership has swelled to 110. The following appointments were made: Insti-tutional Representative - Paul Mon-ahan; Chairman - Paul Gates; Vice-Chairman - Leonard Dougherty; Secretary - Joe Balavage; Treasurer - Mike Chalawick; Advancement - Matt Gillis; Property - Harry Burns; Outdoorsman - Mike Silie; Publicity - John Malloy.

Chief Herbert Updyke and a com-mittee have volunteered to assist with the merit program so that 60 awards will be available to the troop. These awards are necessary for a lad to become a Star Life and Eagle Scout.

The meeting was followed by a gourmet Pig Roast with all the trimmings. P. Gates, H. Burns, L. Dougherty, and P. Monahan set a table equal to that of the best hotels.

At a recent Fall Round-up, ad-vancements were presented to 40 scouts. In addition, John Butler was promoted to Star Scout and earned merit badges for camping, swim-ming and fishing.

Other merit badges awarded were: Home repairs, Russel Monte; safety, John Kritchener; reading Patrick Mal-loy; firemanship, John Kritchener; swimming Edward Kurbsta, William Carroll, Richard Konnick, Daniel Mal-loy, John Ruckno, Patrick Malloy, Charles Dunn and Robert Walensky. Charles Dunn and John Ruckno were elected senior patrol leaders. Thomas Harris was elected assistant senior patrol leader.

Paul Silie, Jerry Lukasavage and Edward Jenkins were elected junior assistant scout leaders.

The explorers' Record Hop was very successful. It was followed by a trip to Lehigh University on Sat-urday where the boys attended the Bucknell-Lehigh football game. The scout mothers will meet Wed-nesday, Nov. 22, at 8 o'clock in the auditorium to make plans for the Christmas party.

Mrs. Peg Tyler requests the pres-ence of all mothers so that complete arrangements can be made at this time.

Neighbors and friends of the scouts are being contacted for candy orders. Profits from this source are used to equip the scouts for camp-ing.

DEFINITIONS

Trivia: material which an organi-zation other than your own has succeeded in getting into the Dal-las Post.

Dead-Line: a set time for submis-sion of material to the Dallas Post, an be successfully ignored if (a) ou forgot to turn the date on the alendar; (b) if you were up last light with the baby; (c) if Johnny ame home from school with a headache. Any of the foregoing auto-matically creates space in the news-paper.

Front Page Material: Any kind of publicity relating to PTA, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, bazaars, chicken suppers. These take precedence over establishment of a new business; the burning of a barn by a light-ning bolt; the death of a prominent citizen; route of the new highway.

Rule for Preparation of Material for Publication: These are strictly for other people. Pay no attention to requests to use one side of the paper print, write legibly or type or lock up spelling of names in the phone book. Besides, there's that old envelope, and it would be a shame to waste good paper on the Dallas Post. And somebody there in the office can look up the spelling. That's their job.

Lost Dog: if you find it, it's a nasty little thing, snaps at the kids, dashes through the open kitchen door, and is infested with fleas. If you lose it, it's a sweet pet, simply marvelous with the child-ren, the cleanest thing you ever saw around the house, and the kids are desolate. Same dog. It's all in the eye of the beholder.

Outrageous favoritism: the menu of your church supper did not in-clude the hot biscuits and the cole slaw. And last time, the wilted lettuce salad was omitted. The church down the road got its en-tire menu printed, including the beverage and home-made pie. I want it Exactly the way I wrote it. Some day, just for fun, an article will get printed just the way it was written.

Why didn't you get Aunt Susie's name in that list of Guests? After all, there were only fifty names, taken over the telephone.

Press Day: Well, why can't you take news up to the last minute? You only publish once a week, you haven't anything to do the other six days.

The difference between failure and success is doing the thing nearly right and doing it exactly right.

Here's your comforting thought for today: the world changes so fast that you couldn't stay wrong all the time if you tried.

It Pays To Advertise

"If I'd had thirty pianos, I could have sold them all," reports a cus-tomer who was run ragged with phone calls Thursday and Friday. The piano went to the first man who called. Mrs. Barlow says she practically needed roller-skates on Thursday, to run between kitchen and phone, and that Friday started out the same way. Her husband says, "When you get lonesome, just put an ad in the Dallas Post. It's sure fire."

Many employees spend time shin-ing up to the boss that they should use in polishing off some work.

Some people do not know which holiday they enjoy most—their own or the bosses'.
