

Double Funeral For Victims Of Red Rock Crash

Mother And Child Die As Texas Airman Forces Car Off Road

Forced off the road by an oncoming Air Force Base car half a mile North of Red Rock, a mother and an infant son are dead, and a father is badly injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barnes, coming home for Thanksgiving Wednesday night from Rochester with their two sons, were on their way to the home of Mrs. Barnes' mother, Mrs. John Sponseller in Lehman, where Mrs. Barnes had celebrated her 32nd birthday two weeks earlier.

Mrs. Barnes slowed down at 10 p.m. to watch deer standing by the roadside, rousing four-year old John from sleep to enjoy the sight.

A car driven by a Red Rock airman at high speed, and passing another car, forced her off the road. The cars collided head-on.

Mr. Barnes, holding seventeen-month old Jimmie on his knee, was thrown from the car into a water-filled ditch. Four-year old John, obeying his father's command to duck, dived under the dash.

Jimmie died of a fractured skull in the office of a Dushore physician. Mrs. Anna Barnes died without regaining consciousness at Robert Packer Hospital early Thanksgiving morning, shortly after midnight, and half an hour after admission. She was taken to Sayre in the Air Base ambulance.

Airman Pleasant McKinney, 22, married and with children in Texas, was critically injured. He and Mr. Barnes were admitted to Robert Packer Hospital. Mr. Barnes will reportedly be on crutches for three months with an injured hip joint.

Little John, taken to Lehman by a Mr. and Mrs. Evans of Buffalo, on their way to spend Thanksgiving in Plymouth, guided his rescuers to the home of his grandmother in Lehman.

Mrs. Sponseller had already been informed of the accident. She had not expected the family until Friday evening, as the birthday and Thanksgiving had already been celebrated November 9. Mr. Barnes found that his construction work in Rochester could be postponed, and the family decided to take the trip, to see Anna's mother and Charles' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Barnes in Huntsville.

John was X-Rayed Monday at Robert Packer, when he developed a limp in his left leg, and will be X-Rayed again, later, for a possible injured ligament. At this time he was able to see his father still a patient, and unable to attend the funeral of his wife and infant son.

Mother and child were buried together Monday afternoon in Evergreen Cemetery. Conducting services from the Bronson Funeral Home were Rev. Charles Frick, Pastor of Huntsville Christian Church, and Rev. Norman Tiffany, Pastor of Lehman Methodist Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes were married eleven years ago at the White Church on the Hill in Trucksville.

Anna Sponseller Barnes was a native of Kingston. The family lived in Shavertown for a time, and in Jackson Township before moving to Lehman when Anna was in the seventh grade. She attended both Kingston Township and Lehman Township schools. Charles also attended Lehman High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes had lived four years at Vero Beach, Florida, before moving to Rochester late this summer.

She was a member of Lehman Methodist Church. Before marriage, she was employed at the convalescent home in Huntsville. Her father, the late John Sponseller, died fifteen years ago.

This is the second bad accident for Charles Barnes. When he was at Lehman High School, coming home from band practice on a foggy night, the car in which he and his brother Sterling Barnes were passengers ran into a truck containing junk, with pipes protruding from the rear.

Charles, in the air force, saw service during World War II on Okinawa.

Little John still sees cars coming at him at night. Four headlights side by side, filling the road.

Mrs. Barnes leaves husband; her mother; her son John; a sister, Mrs. Garwin Tough of Lehman; a brother Jack, Los Angeles.

The baby's grandparents are Mrs. Sponseller and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Barnes; his great-grandmother is Mrs. Therza Barnes of Wilkes-Barre.

Pallbearers were Lewis Naugle, Sterling Barnes Jr., Jack Davis, George Carey, Robert James, James Sholtz and Robert Barnes.

Fined $50 For Charging Toll Phone Calls To Grandmother

A young man who refused to obey his elderly grandmother's request to refrain from placing long distance telephone calls and having them charged to her account, this week paid the cost of the calls for a two month period and was fined an additional $50 when given a hearing before Justice of the Peace George Prater.

The young man was Earl Van Campen Jr., who for many weeks was a bed patient guest of his grandmother Mrs. Warren Yeisley, Foster Street, who nursed him following a serious automobile accident earlier this year. He is still in a cast but no longer stays with his grandmother.

Concerned about her increasing telephone toll charges, Mrs. Yeisley asked Manager John Landis of Commonwealth Telephone Company what he could do about it. Mr. Landis replied that there was nothing the phone company could do since it looked to payment from the owner of the phone where tolls were placed. He did, however, explain that Mrs. Yeisley could do something about it under Act 300 which appears on Page 2 of all telephone directories.

Act 300, effective September 1, 1957, provides that any one with intent to defraud, who gives information to the operator or agent of any telephone company, so that the charge therefor is made to the account of another without authorization shall be liable to a fine of $50 or thirty days imprisonment.

Mrs. Yeisley had the warrant sworn out for her grandson's arrest before Justice Prater.

First Bear Of The Season

Bill Allabaugh and Harry Spencer brought their kill to the Dallas Post Monday afternoon. The day was dark, and prospect of getting a good picture very dim, but the Poloroïd was equal to the challenge. Lashed firmly on the hood is the 225 pound black bear (dressed weight.) Standing behind the bear are the lucky nimrods.

Bill, who stopped the bear with the third shot from his 30-06 Winchester, said he didn't know which was more scared, the bear or the Bill.

The bear, routed out of a swamp near Long Pond, just beyond Blakeslee in the Poconos, came roaring through the woods toward Bill and Harry, who were staked out. When he came bursting out of the underbrush thirty feet from the waiting hunters, they were not sure whether the infuriated brute would attack or try to get away.

The fatal shot was fired at 10 a.m. Hunters in the area converged upon the spot and helped drag the bear a quarter mile to the highway. It would have been a lot easier, said Harry, if there had been even a little of last week's snowfall to act as a skid.

"It's a big thrill, getting your first bear," Bill announced.

Oversupply From Western Growers Knocked Bottom Out Of The Market

Giles Wilson, who until four years ago spelled his name T-U-R-K-E-Y, says that the low prices on turkeys this year are due to mammoth shipments of frozen turkeys from the Western States, and overproduction all the way round the clock.

No longer raising turkeys (it's his son Nelson who raises turkeys these days) Giles still keeps up to date by reading the Turkey World, which pinpoints the glut of turkeys as the result of overproduction. Vast quantities are kept in cold storage, frozen to meet the growing demand of restaurants for the all-year round turkey sandwich.

Thrown on the market at Thanksgiving, oversupply makes the price per pound drop.

You can't raise a turkey for 29 cents a pound, what with the cost of feed, says Mr. Wilson, an old hand at the turkey business.

The turkey farm in East Dallas raises its own poult, keeping a flock of laying hens to supply eggs for the incubators. Good, strong poult, says Mr. Wilson, able to survive and grow to bronzed beauties by early in November, just in time to meet head-on the onslaught of frozen turkeys for Thanksgiving.

But there's no comparison in taste, says Mr. Wilson. Faithful customers are still willing to meet a higher price in order to get the fresh-killed birds, though there are always a few who fall by the wayside. "They'll be back," says Mr. Wilson.

Small turkey raisers are year by year being forced out of the business, not able to compete with the flood of western turkeys.

"Once you've made a big investment in sheds and equipment," says Mr. Wilson, "it's pretty hard to let go. It's like getting the bear by the tail." The Wilson turkey farm this year raised about 1600 birds, with plenty left for Christmas roasting.
