TV VIA SATELLITE - Next August the United States hopes to send a live telecast across the Atlantic to owners of Europe's 25 million TV sets via satellite.

Use of this way of communications will overcome some of the problems of ground relaying of radio and TV signals. TV signals travel in a straight line, so they can't be sent beyond the horizon except by relay stations or by cables. Signals dispatched to a satellite, though, can be relayed back to earth in a jump of thousands of miles.

The satellite used will be of a type different from the earliest ones developed for space communications experiments. These were called "passive" satellites, which carried no transmission equipment but reflected radio waves the way a mirror reflects light waves.

The first Warden in the area, Nathaniel, lived near the corner of Lake Street and is mentioned in the viewers report when the road was laid out from Goss Corners to Lake St. in 1828. Nathan Worden, probably the same, appears in other records in 1823, perhaps earlier. Nathaniel was the father of John, Samuel, and Abraham. Samuel and John Worden were assessed with 160 acres of land, no house, in 1818. Samuel subsequently lived in the vicinity of the Cemetery, his brother Abram or Abraham on the College Farm, and, at least later in life, John lived on Huntville Street, where his daughter Suzanna died when she was nearly a hundred. Another brother, Joseph, located at Harveys Lake, and one named Henry near Evans Falls. There were several others.

John Garbutt, and Mrs. Franklin buried at Warden Cemetery. He had a son John, and besides Suzanna, several daughters. Harriet married Joseph Atherholt and lived on a farm at the top of Center Hill. Mary married Madden Roushey; Elizabeth married Henry Hockenbury. Adelaide was the wife of Moses Kitchen; Clara became Mrs. Samuel Hull; and Priscilla married an Orr. Another sister was the wife of Theodore Major.

Rambling Around

By The Oldtimer—D. A. Waters

The Warden Cemetery (Also spelled Worden and Warden), still in use and well maintained, is not one of the oldest hereabouts, but it contains the grave of the oldest native in Dallas, then Bedford, Deming Spencer died Feb. 23, 1873, age 76 years, which would make him born in 1797, although tradition has it 1800. According to HISTORY OF DALLAS TOWNSHIP, Pa. by W. P. Ryman, he was the first white child born here, in the house of John Leonard before his parents had their own house finished. Elam and Daniel Spencer owned about 250 acres of land in the vicinity of Goss Corners and eastward, extending toward the new school. The Cemetery also contains the grave of Susanna Spencer, born in 1797 and several later ones. The Spencers have always been numerous in the area and still are.

The first Warden in the area, Nathaniel, lived near the corner of Lake Street and is mentioned in the viewers report when the road was laid out from Goss Corners to Lake St. in 1828. Nathan Worden, probably the same, appears in other records in 1823, perhaps earlier. Nathaniel was the father of John, Samuel, and Abraham. Samuel and John Worden were assessed with 160 acres of land, no house, in 1818. Samuel subsequently lived in the vicinity of the Cemetery, his brother Abram or Abraham on the College Farm, and, at least later in life, John lived on Huntville Street, where his daughter Suzanna died when she was nearly a hundred. Another brother, Joseph, located at Harveys Lake, and one named Henry near Evans Falls. There were several others.

John Garbutt, and Mrs. Franklin buried at Warden Cemetery. He had a son John, and besides Suzanna, several daughters. Harriet married Joseph Atherholt and lived on a farm at the top of Center Hill. Mary married Madden Roushey; Elizabeth married Henry Hockenbury. Adelaide was the wife of Moses Kitchen; Clara became Mrs. Samuel Hull; and Priscilla married an Orr. Another sister was the wife of Theodore Major.

Abraham had a large family. Mahaleth was the mother of Edward Hunter; other children were Ura; Eliza; Abilene; George; Sidney; Benson; Spencer, father of Sherman; and Perry, father of Howard, Mrs. Jhn Garbutt, and Mrs. Franklin Brenner. Abraham died young, Sept. 9, 1847 not quite 43.

William Emmons (1796-1887) called Daddy Emmons, one of the best known men in the area, and his wife Lydia (1794-1872) were not here in the earlier days. Martin Davis (1787-1860) may have been related through marriage of their daughter.

Most of the early Honeywells are buried in the Rice Cemetery but the Warden has the grave of William (1791-1872) one of the pioneers, also his wife Elizabeth (1802-1869). There are many later ones.

There is a large section of Fishers beginning with Jacob Fisher (1797-1861). Jacob Miers (1795-1838) appears to be the earliest of that family, and his wife Sarah (1800-1874).

Oldest of the Kunkle family seems to be Conrad (1810-1869) and his wife Polly (1810-1846). The Goss family is represented by Almon (1808-1893) and his wife Sally Ann (1803-1880).

A little older were John Bryant (1793-1880) and his wife Martha (1799-1859).

The Lake Street Corner at Center Hill Road was formerly the site of the common rural set-up of church and cemetery adjoining. The present Rosary Hall for decades was the Methodist Church, the only church in Dallas for many years. In this case the Cemetery was in use first.

Most of the Warden's had large families and intermarried with other families in this area so that today there are many residents related to the Warden family. Sometime it will be necessary to give the family a full column.

We have not resumed writing a column for the city papers. A recent item quoting remarks about walking in the Back Mountain Area was condensed from this column published Dec. 1, 1960, over a year ago. It's a compliment that anyone thinks it was worth saving that long, and good enough to use when a filler was needed.

Ten, Twenty and Thirty Years Ago In The Dallas Post

IT HAPPENED 30 YEARS AGO:

The new building of the Dallas Bank was opened for inspection. A new concrete highway between Dallas and Tunkhannock was projected, with construction to start during the summer.

Harveys Lake Light Co. reduced its rates for the second time in a year.

Theodore Stoeckel, 80, died at his home in Huntsville.

Four-year old Irene Kitchen, daughter of Dorey Kitchen of Shavertown, was almost instantly killed when she darted into the path of an oncoming car driven by W. A. Ryman.

Dallas defeated Lehman in the first game of the bi-County Basketball League, 28 to 18.

It was the twelfth anniversary of the passing of the Eighteenth Amendment.

Lester Crispell, senior, and Hazel Dymond sophomore, students at Monroe Township, were married.

The former National Bank Building was sold to Commonwealth Telephone Co.

Methodist Churches were still referred to as "M. E." churches. Something new was on the market - electric carillons for churches, developed by RCA.

Fig bars were three pounds for a quarter, and you could get a new broom that would sweep clean for 23 cents. Whole wheat bread was 7 cents a loaf.

Grand opening of the new bank building was heralded by a supplement in the paper showing six of old buildings, Raub Hotel, the Lehigh Valley pavilion at Harveys Lake, the original Gregory building, etc.

IT HAPPENED 20 YEARS AGO:

Mrs. Marie Morza of Huntsville was injured in a head-on collision near her home.

Another 56 men volunteered for duty at Daddow Isaacs Post observation station, to keep track of plane movements.

Farmers who needed tires were hopeful of getting them, if replacement were absolutely necessary. Tire rationing was stiffening up.

F. Roy Seafoss, Dallas, was top potato man for Pennsylvania at the Farm Show.

Demand for auto stamps was brisk, 300 in four days.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Harris, Harveys Lake, lost a six month son Harold, with bronchial pneumonia.

A car driven by George Ladamus, Harveys Lake, struck and injured a twelve year old girl from Court-dale.

Boyd F. Cooper died at his home in Tucksville.

Alfred Sidorek, 42, died in his home on Demunds Road.

John Roberts and Joseph Anthony were compiling an album of photographs of men in the service.

Married: Betty Lewis to Wesley Cave, Kathleen Jean Davis to Walter Rau. Joan Blackman to Robert B. Harvey.

Mrs. John Nicholson had word that her son Charles Mattingly was safe after having flown a bomber to Manila just before Pearl Harbor was attacked.

Robert Summerville, coach at Kingston Township, joined the army.

William Bertels purchased the John Russell farm.

IT HAPPENED 10 YEARS AGO:

This was the year when mad foxes invaded the Back Mountain. One woman eventually died, many residents were bitten.

Mrs. Harold Dickson of East Dallas, who diverted the attention of the grey fox which was attacking her small son Harold III, and took the attack on her own fingers, was mangled when she choked the rabid animal to death. She took Pasteur treatment, but eventually died.

George Z. Keller Jr. died aged 41. Donald Lewis, Carverton, took a silver medal for an acre of tomatoes at the Farm Show.

Lance Walker was voted Senior of the Month at Dallas Township school.

Married: Aleatha Rosaire Jones, to Robert F. Fahringer.

Died: Oliver R. Saunders, 51, Huntsville Road.

have moved into their new home on Chase Road in Chase Manor. Mr. Pauletti is a teacher of electricity at Elmer Meyers' High School.

Mrs. Robert Wienecki advises that her mother is very much improved and has been able to leave the Nesbitt Hospital for her home.

Leland Murray, Jackson Township, and Thomas Watkins, Wilkes-Barre, left Tuesday morning for Ft. Lauderdale. Mr. Watkins will remain in Florida for the rest of the winter.

Mrs. Leland Murray entertained the W.S.C.S. of Jackson Methodist Church at her home Thursday evening. Attending were Rev. and Mrs. Norman Tiffany, Mesdames, Julia Youlls, Lena Roushey, Evelyn Smith, Mary Ashton, Loretta Reakes, Marjorie Bonning and Edith Bonning.

W.S.C.S. will serve the dinner for Jackson Firemen's thirteenth anniversary, January 27.

A lot of us this winter feel as if we'd been run through the wringer, what with the zero spell, the January Thaw, and now the flu, but it is a heartening thought that within six weeks we will be admiring the first orange crocus, and that after that, even allowing time out for two full-fledged blizzards and six onion snows, things ought to begin looking up.

And in the meantime there are hungry birds to feed, brilliant flashes of color darting toward the suet feeder. The sun is beginning to swing back again, far enough toward the North now to make a perceptible difference in the length of the days.

It still looks like a long cold winter, as we settle toward the deep-freeze of February.

But we don't have the avalanches that plague Colorado this year, and our houses are built to withstand the icy blasts.

We don't have to lie awake nights wondering if the smudge pots are going to keep the orange trees from freezing.

We don't need to keep a weather eye on the thermometer to see if it will hit the freezing point and reduce the tomato crop to a shambles.

We know it is going to be zero, or below, tonight, and if we are at all smart, we will start the faucets dripping before we go to bed.

Nothing like knowing exactly what we're up against. And that is zero, and below zero, and better forget that crocus for awhile.

It is nested snugly beneath the iron-bound earth, but it will be along in its season.

Followed by daffodils and tulips and lilacs and laurel.

Editorially Speaking: SOMETHING TO KEEP IN MIND

There is small doubt that renewed attacks will continue to be made on the pharmaceutical industry. It will be charged again and again that this industry—which, through costly and often non-profitable research, has produced remedies that have brought miraculous relief and health to legions of people—operates on the all-the-traffic-will-bear principle.

These charges can be powerfully refuted by simple sets of established statistics. To take just one, over a recent 10-year period the wholesale price of drugs rose but three per cent, as against a 22 per cent surge in the average prices of all industrial products.

But there is much more to the drug story than the cold figures. A factor which is frequently overlooked is that the family breadwinner is, often, back on the job much sooner because of modern drug therapy. He's getting his paychecks again—whereas, in past times, he might have spent long periods of time in the hospital or become permanently incapacitated.

To take an actual example, a surgeon had to give up his practice because of crippling arthritis. Then he underwent extensive treatment with a newly developed drug. The result was that he could resume practice again—and perform his skills for the benefit of many hundreds of people who might otherwise have suffered because of his incapacity.

This, of course, is just one example that could be cited out of numberless others—covering all trades, all professions, and people of every age and position. It's something to keep in mind when the attacks begin again.

SAFETY VALVE . . .

YOU BET HE DOES

The Dallas Post Dallas, Pa. Gentlemen:

On Saturday afternoon I was fishing at the Alderson section of Harveys Lake and I noticed two small boys skating on the opposite side of the lake.

While watching them one of the boys backed up and fell into the area cut away around the dock. I immediately dropped my pole and started to run to help. But without a moments hesitation the other boy grabbed him by the coat and held him until he was able to drop to the ice on his stomach. He then proceeded to pull the boy out.

He took the near-drowned boy into a home and in checking later I found his name was Pat Stenger, and he is no more than eight or nine years old.

I think he certainly deserves some credit because if he decided to run for help I certainly would never have been there in time to save the boy.

IT WAS MUTUAL

Dear Mrs. Hicks, and Editors of Dallas Post:

On behalf of the members of Gate of Heaven Altar and Rosary Society, Our Pastor and Moderator, Rev. Francis A. Kane, I take this liberty of extending our personal word of gratitude and sincere appreciation for the splendid public service you so graciously rendered during the past year towards our Society and he many other activities of our Parish.

Thank You and May God Bless You! Sincerely, Mrs. Joseph J. Drust, (Public Relations of 61)

The trouble with most every husband is that he wishes his wife could make bread like his mother, while she wishes hubby could make dough like her father.

HAVE YOU THE ANSWER?

Dear Editor: I'm writing this hoping that you will help me find the answer to some questions.

Do you know whether or not our public schools could accept an endowment from a philanthropist or well-meaning citizen without jeopardizing State or Federal aid?

At a gathering of friends recently, we discussed our new school, our new taxes, of course, and increases to come.

We also thought how nice it would be if we had a swimming pool that could be used for the public the year round as well as the school. Naturally this would cost money and at the present, even I, feel the tax burden is great enough but could it be accomplished by other means and be definitely a part of the school?

Perhaps if this letter were printed some of our school board members could answer this publicly so that not only I but all citizens might know the answer.

Many persons leave money to Churches, charities and other organizations but to date I have not heard of anyone endowing a public school.

Respectfully yours Mrs. Jack Barnes

Russell Gregory Buried On Friday
