many pageants and such a variety of food, arts and crafts that one could not keep an accurate count. The lore of the "feather" stock;

sauerkraut making; a special section and wedding customs of the Plain Dutch and the Gay Dutch; craftsmen at work making baskets, brooms, fish nets and barrels; bread or bake oven; cider pouring from an 18th century press—these are but a few of the festival features. Food is distinctive and abundant.

"drechta koocha" (funnel cake, with raised dough and steamed) are only a small part of the menu. Al ways included at any Dutch feast are the traditional seven sweets and seven sours. Pennsylvania's Governor David L. Lawrence attended last year's festival. "This is real Americana at its best," he said," he said. Kutztown, midway between Allentown and Reading, is 100 miles west of New York City and about 65 miles north of Philadelphia.

a busy life looking after several relatives.

Although she is not at all tall, Calla conveys the impression of stateliness with her erect stature. Proud of her fine collection of books, Calla considered reading her favorite pastime and regrets that her eyesight no longer permits her to do much reading. She has also pursued flowers gardening, china collecting and identifies many species of birds. Mrs. Parrish has always maintained her own household and even in her mid-nineties did interior painting although she now enlists some help on the more difficult chores.

As a staunch supporter of her political party, Calla has never missed voting and is keenly interested in politics and current events. Lt. Carl B. Olsen, left, Terrace support of combat forces in the at- Sp4 James P. Kelly Jr., Jackson One of her close friends calls her a
