OUTSTANDING MAN

One meets nice people in a hospital. A patient in the ward at Nesbitt where Dorothy was a lady from Dallas with a sweet face and lots of courage. She is Mrs. Wright, mother of William Wright whom our family recognized as having seen him around the Library Auction. We met William's wife also. They have been most attentive to mother Wright. I had noted the devotion of this man toward his mother before I found out who he was.

One afternoon as we were leaving the hospital Mr. Wright casually told us he would not be down that night to see his mother on account of a joint dinner meeting of service clubs. The next day we found out that he had been awarded a plaque for outstanding work as a citizen. And when he came in to the ward to see his mother he proudly showed her the plaque. How her face lit up! Mrs. Wright told us that usually when he comes in at night he is very quiet but not that night. In the bounce, turned on the lights, until his wife asked if he had been in an accident or something! Then he showed the plaque. The committee had not had his name engraved on it yet because it was feared the secret might leak out and they wanted it to be a surprise for him. I was glad I was there to see the pleasure on his mother's face.

JANET DYMOND'S FIRST SCHOOL

We drove past West Pittston school the other day and saw "our" Janet Dymond out with her class of eighteen or so little folks. Janet has been studying at Misericordia and now teaches downtown. She has had considerable experience right at home with her five children and comes by teaching naturally. Her mother, Ida Howell, is a teacher in West Pittston.

LOCAL DOCUMENTARY FILM SHOWN

WDAU station has been preparing a documentary film on "The Misunderstood Migrant." It had been announced some time back that it was going to be shown, but another program came in its place. Then one night last week there it was.

The story of migrant workers and of the Tri-County Migrant Ministry was well woven together with many familiar local scenes. Bob Carroll was shown interviewing several principals in action, such as a grower, a crew leader, a migrant worker, a migrant ministry meeting (me sitting in the front seat) and an especially good picture of Rev. Edwin Lintern being interviewed. I do not know but I imagine this film will be available to be shown again.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Krum left last Friday morning in the 12-bus cavalcade to Atlantic City to attend the Mid-Atlantic Shrine Convention. There were over 650 attending. They returned Sunday evening.

Our road? O sure, they are getting along. Crushed rock is being laid from Fred Krum's down toward the river road. We are willing for them to begin up at our corner any time now and lay the rock — and then the black-top — down the hill. As much time as I have spent overseeing this road construction no one ever asks my advice on procedures!

Last Saturday was a happy day for all of us — Dottie came home from Nesbitt Hospital after 12 days. Emma Miles has returned home after spending several days with her sister Kate (Mrs. Lloyd Drake) who has been a hospital patient in Pottstown but now is home.

CARVERTON NEWS

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Nielson have just returned from a wonderful trip through New England. Outstanding was their visit to Andover, Maine where the telestar station is. Mrs. Nielson describes it as breath-taking in its beauty and awe-inspiring in what it means. At certain times the thing moves, I suppose when it picks up a global message to relay. TV from around the world! What would my grandfather have thought? Or, for that matter, what would my father think? Shucks, why go back that far? What would I have thought of such a notion two years ago? Or even of TV a few years ago!

Mirabile dictu! As Pedro Gilloitt used to exclaim. (That's Latin!)

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Fitzer Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fitzer, both families formerly of Carverton, now of Florida, were visiting Nelsens and other former neighbors. Also visiting the Nelsens were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Miller of Rochester.

Stock Harveys Lake With Husky Trout

Ten thousand Brown Trout were stocked in Harveys Lake in two days this week. The fish were described by District Fish Warden James Yoder as being of "exceptional size". Some Rainbows were mixed into the lot.

"This is the best thing that ever happened to Harveys Lake," the Warden observed. "There is a possibility that there will be a good carry-over into future years." He explained that Brown Trout flourish in lake-waters, get fairly hard to catch, and there is a general decrease in fishing pressure during the fall.

Some Lake residents noted that they saw the fish pulled out as fast as they were thrown in. Warden Yoder said that, although this may have been true, it was so only for isolated groups of lucky fishermen.

He also observed that it is not true that hatchery-grown fish must live in the lake for a time before they become edible.

The reason for their softness, he said, is that trout, like their cousins, the salmon, deteriorate unless cleaned immediately after catching, and most fishermen do not do this. They think the softness is due to easy living at the hatchery, and not to their own care.
