Judge Rules Unhappy Home Is Not Ground For Divorce

"The evidence of indignities cumulatively constitutes no more than incompatibility," the court in banc held Friday in denying a divorce to Mrs. Helen B. Hildebrand, 136 Clearview Avenue, Trucksville, from her husband, Edmund G. Hildebrand, same address.

The decision was handed down by Judge Richard L. Bigelow with President Judge Frank L. Pinola and Judge Jacob Schiffman concurring. The court concluded Mrs. Hildebrand's "evidence is not of such a nature warranting an interference of settled hate and estrangement. Plaintiff's evidence (even if she were an injured and innocent spouse) indicates that the parties' home and relationship is not the happiest or most blissful."

Judge Bigelow quoted the Superior Court in another divorce case: "Bad temper, surliness, disagreeable disposition and antagonistic attitude have never been held sufficient to establish the charge of indignities. We have repeatedly stated that to sustain the granting of a divorce on the ground of indignities the evidence must show a course of conduct showing settled hate and estrangement."

The court found "the evidence in this case does not meet this test, and our divorce statutes and decisional law does not countenance the granting of a divorce where, as here, the evidence shows only trivial occurrences which cumulatively amount to no more than incompatibility." On the basis of the court's review of the testimony and examination of the master's report, Judge Bigelow dismissed seven of Mrs. Hildebrand's exceptions to a master's report denying a divorce and followed the master's recommendation.

Mrs. Hildebrand is a medical secretary and her husband an architect engineer. Five hearings were held and the master made an exhaustive and painstaking report recommending the divorce be denied.

Attorney Mitchell Jenkins represented Mrs. Hildebrand. Attorney Hopkin T. Rowlands represented Hildebrand.
