

Blockade Fails At Pike's Creek

Bandit Disappears In Silkworth Area

Lake and Lehman Township police set up a blockade at Pike's Creek intersection of Route 118 and 29 Saturday evening in an unsuccessful attempt to halt the armed robber of a West Naticoke filling station.

The bandit, a slight man in his early twenties, wearing sports clothes, had either made it through the intersection before arrival of police, or else had found some refuge in the area between Pike's Creek and West Naticoke.

Sgt. Trooper Gene Brannon, in Dallas vicinity, received a call that station-owner Frank Rominski, Main Road and Poplar Street, West Naticoke, had been robbed by a gunman of $50, and that the bandit was probably headed toward the Back Mountain, driving Rominski's car.

Brannon sped to Pike's Creek intersection, and called Assistant Police Chief Walbridge Leinthal, of

Likes Back Mountain, Co-Ed School System

Nancy McNaughton, Rotary Exchange Student from Australia, is impressed with the number of flavors of ice cream in the United States, but is not in favor of too much variety in school subjects.

She told an assembly of about 70 at the first Junior Women's Club Meeting, October 2, at Prince of Peace Church that the limited number of subjects, when given full exploration, gives a more complete education, as found in Australia.

In the address, the young student

Lake Township.

They were joined by Lehman Chief Joseph Ide and Lieutenant Russell Walters, with Patrolmen John Major and Paul Goodwin.

With descriptions of the car and the thief, the police waited for about three hours. The car was found abandoned after a short time, two miles up the highway from West Naticoke, still full of gas, and with tire marks of another car leading away from the area.

Still they checked all cars, although there were at least five conceivable detours from the highway. Assistant Chief Leinthal says it is possible that the robber could have made it through the intersection before Trooper Brannon got there, if he found another car quickly.

now living with Mr. and Mrs. James Lacy, Terrace Drive, Dallas, compared a number of sectors of American and Australian life.

In Australian advertising, it seems, the emphasis is on American habits and American fashion. That is, a soap-manufacturer would say: Women in America are lovelier because they use this type of soap. And so forth.

On the food market, steak is relatively cheap, be it beef or kangaroo. Beefsteak costs about the same as chicken in the United States. Chicken, on the other hand, she explained, is a holiday extravagance only.

In general Nancy finds American food much sweeter than Australian. Australia's climate, she told the Women's Club, is temperate enough to allow two growing seasons, like Southern California. Never having seen snow, except on distant mountain peaks, she is looking forward to the expected rough winter.

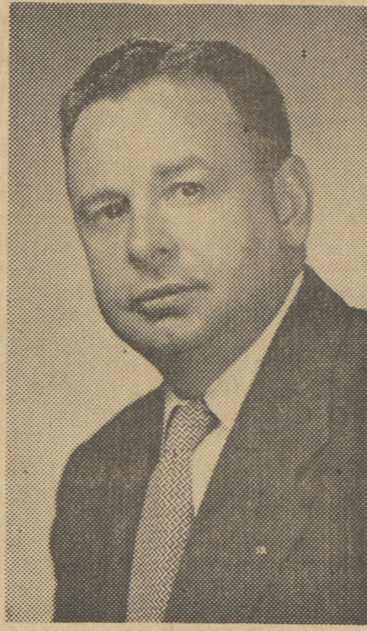

Nancy is still not used to the large highways and supersonic speed limits indigenous to America. She travels every day to Kingston High School, which will be her Alma Mater for the year. She likes the idea of co-educational schools. In Australia, her school was for girls only.

Nancy was warmly received by the Junior Women's Club, whom she told that she had already grown quite fond of the Dallas area.

across highways, the Pennsylvania Game Commission reports.

October and November are the two top months in accidental highway deaths of deer. Open season on other animals and fowl scares them just as much as their own season, and these two months are also their mating time. They will be moving around more, and often in pairs.
