Leonard A. Philo, 72, Dies Quietly In Sleep

Leonard A. Philo, 72, for 45 years a resident of Bunker Hill died quietly in his sleep early Thursday morning. As he had not been ill, death was presumably caused by a sudden heart attack.

He was buried Saturday afternoon at Mt. Greenwood, following services conducted by Rev. Edmund L. John of Wyoming Avenue Christian Church.

Mr. Philo's interests centered about mechanics. During World War I he was employed by the Armament Plant which turned out heavy artillery shells in the Mathewson Building, Kingston. During World War II, he was in war construction work in the Philadelphia area, working at the Willow Grove airfield and on various other Federal projects.

Before moving to Bunker Hill, he lived for a time in Loyalville, where he hauled bark for the Noxen Tannery.

In the period between the wars, he was driver for The Hub for 25 years.

After World War II, he invested in bulldozer and equipment, and went into the grading and excavating business with his son Marvel at Norristown. He was still engaged in this business at the time of his death, though taking it a little more easily.

He was a native of Factoryville, son of the late Joshua and Ann Jackson Philo.

He leaves his widow, the former Lillian Wilcox of Wilkes-Barre; two sons, Lee of Bunker Hill and Marvel, Norristown; a daughter, Mrs. Charles Bray, Bunker Hill; five grandchildren; a brother Oscar, Neshaminy; sisters; Mrs. Ola James, Bristol, and Mrs. Myrtle Keene, Hawthorne, N. J.

Ruffs Delighted With Home In Loyalville

Ted and Mrs. Ruff are having a ball fixing up their new home in Loyalville. The Whitesells have already built a two-car garage for them. The view, Mrs. Ruff says, is magnificent. The former Delaney home is next door to Governor Fine's place, not far from Payne's Store, in a quiet section where country is still country.

Early in October, Mr. and Mrs. Ruff moved from their home on Forty-Second Street. Ted finds it not much farther to drive to his many plumbing jobs, as he travels for miles anyway in the pursuit of his business. A rumor that he was about to retire is completely without foundation. Ted will be persuading balky furnaces to start for a good many years to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Salamon have purchased the former Ruff home.
