Jackson Twp.

Spring arrived today right on time. This reporter was awakened Sunday morning by the honking of a flock of geese flying northward. Sunday afternoon some of the boys from Chase Manor got out their baseball mitts. One of the neighbors could not resist the temptation to get out in the yard and work. He got out his lawn spreader and spread fertilizer. The spring flowers are beginning to burst through the soil. Mickey Witek of Chase Manor, couldn't resist the call of spring in the air on Sunday—he got out his highpowered sit-down model lawn mower and enjoyed himself riding up and down the road. Edward Mrochko had his motor driven scooter out giving his own and the other children in the neighborhood rides.

Orange

Last Sunday it was the turn of Orange church to provide the Protestant chapel service. Henry Hess was in charge and was speaker. Organist was Roberta Gardner with Marie Perrego as choir leader. Singers were Malcolm and Eudora Baird, Lillian Henderson, Donna Gordon, Marietta Gay, Dorothy Hess, Glenna Rozelle, Myrtle Hoover. Orange MYF handled wheelchairs for the patients. O how those Valley Creek people love to have young folks come and help!

Chuck Collins, Wyoming Valley Council of Churches, was up there at Valley Creek yesterday afternoon. He frequently is there on Sundays and sometimes when I'm on my visits. One of the Orange delegation commented on how nice Mr. Collins was in his visits among the patients, how they seemed to know that in him they have a friend.

By the way, Mr. and Mrs. Collins and four darling children dropped in for a visit at our house yesterday afternoon, Cindy, Pam, Kevin and Clark. They like to run out into the country once in awhile. I commented on Cindy's dimples—one on each cheek. Cindy explained, "That's from eating too much candy."

While doing a good deed bringing a sunshine bouquet to Mrs. Gilbert, Mrs. Sally Vantyle somehow lost her balance and fell full length on our sidewalk. I rushed out to help her up and she had cut the inside of her mouth when her chin hit the sidewalk. Her upper denture had broken into three pieces. The glass vase in which the bouquet was being carried smashed. Two stitches were required to stop the bleeding in her mouth. She insisted she felt able to drive home. The flowers were the gift of the Mary Lewis Bible class to which Ruth belongs. I placed them on Ruth's dresser right by a large mirror. So there are two bouquets!

Cathy brought upstairs a gloxenia with a lovely pink and white bell of a blossom. She placed it so the blossom would face Ruth. Know what that posey did? It kept twisting its slender neck until it looked out the window toward the bright sky.

Marie LaBar told me her son, Marine Gene LaBar, had already phoned her from San Diego where he had flown. He will be there until he is sent on to Okinawa.

Friday night Catherine took a selection of Africa slides over to Shavertown to show to the Keller Class of the Methodist Church. Also a sample of some African curios.

Fight Goes On For Road Work

Ridge Street People Seeking Land Owners

Ridge Street residents of Fernbrook, and neighbors on Harris Street who use Ridge for garage access, are anxiously awaiting a waiver of rights petition to be drawn up by Dallas Township supervisors.

Their signatures, as they told the board last week, will substantiate their willingness even to lose pieces of their yards if the supervisors will make one or two passes over Ridge with a grader, and start calcium treatment.

A two-year-old endeavor to get improvement for the street, which is not yet township property, was brought again to the municipal forum by Mrs. Fred Daley, Mrs. George Stolarick, and Robert Senchak, all of Ridge Street, and Mrs. Stanley Szela, Harris Street.

Other residents now making use of Ridge Street are Frank C. Gelsleichter, Sr., Demunds Road, and Frank Gelsleichter, Jr., Harris Street.

Prominent among arguments against township control of the road, as offered by president supervisor Fred Lamoreaux, was that taxes from the two families living on the street would not begin to pay for the cost of maintenance. Mrs. Stolarick said that Ridge residents nonetheless paid taxes, and that the two Fern Street families nearby enjoyed township road supervision.

An effort is now being made to find owners of vacant lots fronting on Ridge Street, as they too must grant the township permission to alter their land if necessary.

Lamoreaux said the board would certainly give the matter study, but that there were a number of complications.

Mrs. Stolarick says the houses have been on the street for over thirty five years, that at present all the neighbors pitch in and help clear the snow and dig out cars, and that the drainage situation is very bad in spring.

Further discussion at the meeting of Supervisors centered around proposed regional police force for the whole Back Mountain, as recorded in last week's Post, and around a four-page recommendation in Luzerne County Planning Commission's sewer report for a system in this area. Report and responses to it by local political leaders were also discussed in this paper last week.

Adopted were proposals to procure insurance for all vehicles used in township business; to adopt the 1963 budget; and to advertise for bids on road materials.
