On Listening To A Sermon

By REV. CHARLES GILBERT

My pastor Rev. William Reid preached on one of the "Hard Sayings of Jesus" last Sunday: "Be ye therefore perfect", from the last of Matthew 5. It's a wonder I could listen to it, splendid sermon that it was. I had memories of that verse. When I went to Wyoming Seminary 50 years ago I had big ideas of becoming the smartest student, the greatest preacher, pastor of a huge church some day. When I began to study Greek under the exacting demands of Professor Gillott I learned enough Greek to read a little from the New Testament. I seized on this text in Greek, wrote it in my text books, fixed my eye on a Phi Beta Kappa Key. I aimed for the top. But I didn't have it in me, and a nervous breakdown was about as good a way out in those days as there was. And if I couldn't make perfect grades in scholarship how was I to do it in the subtler pursuit of character? I couldn't and didn't. I still think 100% is the proper aim in studies. I still think Christ is the proper aim in character achievement. So I could listen with interest to Sunday's sermon. But how thankful I am for the golden quality of the gospel of grace! God deals with imperfect beings in the only way He can and be the "God of grace and glory". He helps them, gives them impossible goals of living, and then forgives them their abject failures. He has done that with me. His forgiveness doesn't let us off from trying, but it does save us from despair.
