

Senior Shavertown Citizen Recalls Days When Toby's Creek Was Clean

Shavertown boasts a number of elderly citizens, many of whom lead active lives.

Mrs. Rose Steltz, Shaver Avenue, is one of the most vigorous and tends to all of her own affairs at the age of eighty-five.

When Mrs. Steltz moved to Shavertown with her husband, Robert, fifty-five years ago, the community had little resemblance to the area as it is today.

She recalls few dwellings around at that time and well remembers going to the spring under the nearby railway trestle for good drinking water.

Toby Creek is no longer as clean as she remembers it when it supplied those in the vicinity with their water for wash day.

The Lewis Shaver barn, which stood on the upper end of Shaver Avenue, housed the neighbor's cattle, with their owners coming morning and evening to milk the cows.

The whistle of the Lehigh Valley engine brought folks hurrying to see who was coming to visit.

Mrs. Steltz recalls with pleasure their early days here when her husband, a contractor, built many of the homes in the Back Mountain area. She spoke of the moonlit nights when, after the moonset was done, her husband helped her brother, Frank Hubbell, unload lumber from the freight cars nearby.

A large black squirrel, still preserved in excellent condition, hangs on the dining room wall, reminding her of the occasion when Robert Steltz brought it down.

Widowed in 1952 Mrs. Steltz continues to do all her own housework with as tidy a home as one could find anywhere. She recently helped remove the paper from an upstairs bedroom before the painter came to put on a new look.

Sturdy plants brighten her windows during the winter months before their removal into the warm summer sunlight. A huge variety of bright blossoms, fresh for cutting line the well kept beds about her abode.

Spring always gladdens her heart with her garden ready for plowing and planting, where tomatoes, beans, corn and potatoes thrive under her watchful eye. Bobby Allen, her grand-nephew, comes to help her lately, but she never bows to arthritic pains of advancing years, believing that activity keeps the mind alert, and careful eating habits lend aid to useful years.

Pet hens lay their eggs in a rear coop in immaculately kept nests awaiting her daily visits to care for them no matter what the weather. "A good dose of black strap molasses tames them up fine in the springtime," she says, "for the birds need a tonic occasionally, too."

Her radio near her chair keeps her abreast of current events, and she reads as much as possible. A quilt was started not long ago to fill in some spare moments during the long winter. Church pamphlets, well thumbed, lie on a nearby table. She enjoys the visits of her pastor, Rev. Andrew Derrick of Glenview Primitive Methodist Church, Fernbrook.

Voting day finds her scanning the ballot for the best qualified. A staunch Republican, she can be counted on to vote early in the day.

She is often seen shopping in the local markets with her niece, Mrs. Ernest Bell. Mrs. Steltz, who was the former Laura Hubbell, daughter of the late Jasper and Ermina Lutes Hubbell, Nozen, still turns to that community for her favorite physician, who calls to check on her welfare at regular intervals.

Her only close family connection is a sister, Mrs. Lydia Dickerson, Keyport, N. J., aged ninety. Mrs. Steltz will observe her 86th birthday October 12.

Police Auxiliary Sees Travel Film

Back Mountain Policemen, guests of the Police Auxiliary at the third monthly meeting held last Thursday evening at the Lehman Fire Hall, enjoyed with their wives a program of films on their travels shown by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Stainbrook. The next meeting was announced for April 25, at Lehman Fire Hall.

Mrs. Michael Nemechick and Mrs. Joseph Kemag announced that Edward Gdosky, District Game Protector, would show a film on wild life. Mrs. Richard Lloyd, Mrs. Herbert Walters and Mrs. Michael McAvuis will serve refreshments.

At the March meeting, Mrs. Florence Davenport and Mrs. Margaret Bonning were made honorary members. They were presented certificates in recognition of service to their community rendered by the late Dennis Bonning Sr. and Fred Davenport, outstanding members of Back Mountain Police Association.

Mrs. Robert Cooper presided, Mrs. William Weaver presented the minutes, Mrs. Joseph Ide the treasurer's report.

Public Invited To Art Exhibit At Lake-Lehman

Lake-Lehman High School art exhibit is scheduled for Monday night. Student work will include pastels, oils, copper relief, scratch board, mosaics, wall hangings, studies in charcoal and pencil.

Work was done under direction of Jane Cornell, art instructor.

Following the exhibit, John Milauskas will direct the Lake-Lehman Dance Band, the Reed Choir, and the Brass Choir in a number of selections.

The public is invited.

Jackson Grange Saturday

Jackson Grange members are asked to bring with them a gift handkerchief for Maple Hill Rest Home Saturday evening at the Grange Hall. The handkerchiefs for guests at the Convalescent Home will be accompanied by Easter cards.
