EASTER

By Rev. Francis A. Kane

The death of a man causes those who remain after him to ask, "What has he left us? Are we remembered in his will?" While the soul of that man facing his God in a just judgment is asked, "What have you taken for your journey into Eternity? Is your soul really prepared for this, the greatest event of your life?"

The glorious Feast of Easter brings, therefore, to our mind a subject that is uppermost in the mind of man. It brings us face to face with the thought that we all must die in order that some day we, too, might rise from the dead. Nearly all of Christianity believes in the resurrection and it is for that reason that Easter is such a glorious feast. However, there are these sobering thoughts that Christ, having suffered and passed through the portals of death by His own will and death on the Cross gives us the example that we must also be willing to accept suffering if our death is to bring us to a glorious resurrection.

Certainly the problem of suffering is without an answer and is so inane without the thought that it can lead to a higher life and we can offer this suffering as Christ, Himself, had offered it to His Heavenly Father in order to atone for our sins as Christ, Himself, atoned for the sins of the world. Following the thought of the thief on the cross we would suffer justly because of our sinful natures; but He had no reason for suffering and yet He was willing to accept the ordeal of crucifixion, not because suffering was such a glorious thing, but rather because His love for us did not allow it to be otherwise.

It is, therefore, one of the mysteries of God's Kingdom that many times the innocent suffer as well as the sinner. It does not have to be a mystery if this suffering is added to that of Christ's own suffering. Some day our own tomb will be empty as the Apostles found the tomb where they had laid the body of Christ, also empty and the words "Why do you seek the living among the dead?" Easter morn was a glorious day because in the words of the Apostle, "Death shall no longer have dominion over Him" nor will it have dominion over us if our lives have been patterned after that of our suffering Saviour. But all suffering is acceptable, therefore, if the reward of that suffering is joy eternal. Suffering itself reminds us that our souls are like the gold that only becomes precious after it has been subjected to the crucible of fire to shed its dross, so our soul in the crucible of suffering attains its highest goal as it becomes pure, glorious and strong. Easter gives us that hope and hope in this life is a glorious thing.
