Midnight Brushfire Gets Big Turn-Out

Friday night was just one of those nights for local fire companies and residents alike, as three outfits plus Dallas ambulance all responded to quell a small brush-fire in the woods above the Heights.

"All I heard was sirens", said more than one Heights and upper Dallas resident, trying to find out what it was all about, after being tumbled out of bed around 12:30 by the general alarm.

Dr. Henry M. Laing Company was joined by Shavertown, and two trucks from Lehman were thundering down the road when they were advised by radio that they were not needed.

Mrs. Helen Michael fainted at the scene, and was attended by members of Dallas ambulance.

Originally Shavertown had been called out to help with what they understood to be a fire in East Dallas, but received the change of address in mid-route by radio.

Fire was extinguished by men with Indian tanks.

Fire officials were uncertain just why so much commotion stemmed from a brush fire, but it seemed that it was just one of those things.

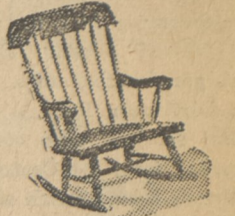

George Block Has Bar Mitzvah Service

Rabbi Earl S. Starr conducted the service and the choir chanted the music ritual.

Following the ceremony, the parents held a reception for the entire congregation.

Municipal Officials Lecture Local Class

Pennsylvania History classes of Dallas Junior High School had a seminar on municipal affairs conducted by Harold Brobst, representing the town council, and Herbert Updyke, police chief of Kingston Township.

Mr. Brobst described Dallas' political composition and offered answers on the budget, zoning laws, municipal consolidation as well as the present and anticipated growing pains of Dallas.

Chief Updyke lectured on the early history of law enforcement, the originality of our judicial procedure of local and state levels with emphasis on juvenile laws and their interpretations.

Many questions were introduced from the student body relating to community affairs. Mr. Baran, faculty member, commented on the over-emphasis of delinquent problems in this community. Both civic officials were in accord with this. After stressing to each student the importance of civic responsibility, both men concluded the seminar reminding every pupil of his community obligation and also suggesting possible course of action.

This seminar was planned and conducted by William Baran, and William Price, ninth grade Social studies instructors.
