Walter Meade Lands Big Canadian Catch

Walter Meade returned from a fishing trip in Swisher, Quebec, Canada, after a successful week's catch, and has opened up his ide-town garage again.

Bill Neil, Shavertown, Clayton Edwards, Sweet Valley, and Daniel Williams, West Pittston, accompanied him, and should be able to attest to his catch of a 33-inch muskellunge, and quite a few northern and walleye pike and channel cats.

Kindergartners Get Big Thrill From Fire Truck

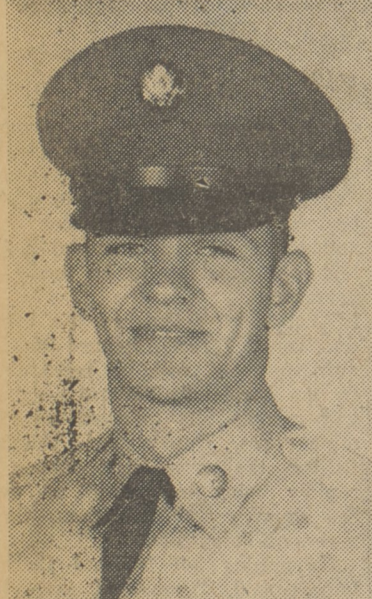

Some of the Volunteer Firemen of the Shavertown Fire Company brought both fire trucks and the Kingston Township Ambulance to Westmoreland Elementary School to talk to all of the kindergartners and to let them have a close look at the trucks. They explained about the ladders, siren, hose, bells, brooms for brush fires, flood lights, fire extinguishers, axe and many things that were of great interest to five and six year olds. (All of the little boys are going to be volunteer firemen when they grow up.) The firemen let the children try on the fire hats and stand on the trucks. They turned the water on from one truck and let the children see the great pressure going through the hose.

Those who talked to the morning session of kindergartners were: Andrew Roan, president of Shavertown Fire Company; Harry Smith and Stanley Davis. Those who talked to the afternoon group were: William Pugh, assistant fire chief; Larry Dymond, a member of the Junior Firemen John Chapple, Anthony Platta and Andrew Roan.

Rambling Around

By The Oldtimer — D. A. Waters

Harry Brickel, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Brickel and brother of the late Ralph Brickel, was killed by a falling timber in the great cyclone which struck Wilkes-Barre on August 19, 1890, about 5:20 p.m.

There were at first two storms, one, striking Columbia County near Rohrsburg, thence into Union Township, Register, Harveyville, Lake Silkworth and, somewhat reduced in intensity, proceeded toward Wilkes-Barre. All the communities suffered heavy damages, buildings blown down, some unroofed, etc., with a number injured and some fatalities. Approaching Wilkes-Barre it seemed to again pick up momentum.

In the meantime another and much noisier storm arrived coming down the valley and they both arrived at Wilkes-Barre at the same time. It had been lowering and muggy all day and, when the storms approached, became much darker and the air heavier, as thunder and lightning swept around on all sides. The storms seemed to hesitate, again and again, finally came together with a terrible shock and whirled around and around. One of the county judges said the storm then seemed to have a tawny yellow body fringed with black arms or claws.

It struck the Vulcan Machine works, then followed up a swath two to four blocks wide from South Main Street to the railroad tracks as far as Northampton Street, then swerved to the right with its full force along the railroads about to Scott Street, then farther to the right up the mountain. New buildings were demolished, some supposedly very strong ones, many others were deroofed, and much other damage sustained. At least twenty people in the city were killed instantly or so badly injured that they died soon thereafter. Others were killed by the storm before striking Wilkes-Barre. The Record of the Times put out a Cyclone Extra on August 22 (Friday) with four full pages of injury and damage stories and narrow escapes. The railroads had much interference with their operations and an afternoon train carrying many of the best known business men to their summer homes at Glen Summit missed the storm by a very few minutes.

The Record, the daily edition, carried stories every day during the week along with usual material. Some of the general items seem unusual to us. One of the paper's own advertisements reads: "Every lady should have an engraved calling card. It is the one thing needful in social life. . . no lady, either married or single, could do her duty to the circle in which she moves without one of these dainty bits of pasteboard."

A big strike was threatened on The New York Central, being then already partially effective. President Webb announced he was prepared to spend two million dollars to win his point. There was a big story about diamond smugglers caught in New York. There were revolts in Latin America, and unrest in colonial countries. The daily papers carried a column of recipes, also some poetry.

The Red Star Line advertised rates to Antwerp from New York and Philadelphia: first cabin $45, excursion $85, second cabin $35, excursion $65, all marked, "and upwards". Steerage at very lowest rates. Among the bank advertisements the Miners Savings Bank showed paid up capital $150,000, surplus $160,000. Many manufacturing and mercantile firms still with us carried advertisements in 1890. The stock market column, one column only, was less than three inches.

Boston Store offered pie goods, showing regular and sale prices, such as: figured lawns 1 cent, wool challies 12 1/2 cents, French ginghams 15 cents, dark outing cloths 9 cents, best merriac calicoes 5 cents, wash silks 39 cents, Indigo blue prints 7 cents, black henrietta 75 cents, black cashmere 50 cents, all per yard. Oil stoves sold for 58 cents, clothes pins per dozen 1 cent, toilet paper 4 rolls 25 cents, fans 3 cents, men's hose 4 pairs 25 cents, ladies' regular pin stripe hose 13 cents, full regular fast black 21 cents.

Jonas Long offered comparable prices on pie goods, also lace caps reduced to 19 cents and hats to $1.00, undressed kid gloves, 8 button length, 75 cents. Forty-five inch embroidered flouncing was priced at 40 to 60 cents per yard.

The Music Hall offered operatic and dramatic artists at prices from 15 to 50 cents. Local private schools were advertising, including the Wilkes-Barre Female Institute.

Honor Graduate

Allan J. Cease, 142 Franklin Street, was graduated with honors from Wyoming Seminary Monday morning at the 119th Commencement Exercises. Sunday afternoon he was initiated, with seventeen other honor students, into the Cum Laude Society, the academic honor society.

Two other Seminars from the Back Mountain, Kenneth J. Herwig and Verna Lee Pritchard, Trucks-ville, were also admitted to the society.

Allan was accepted for next fall on early admission to Lycoming College on high scholastic standing on partial scholarships. He will study for the Methodist Ministry.

He was guest of honor at a family dinner and open house Sunday given by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Cease, and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Harvey.

Federal Numbers

New number plates have been sent out to more than 350 Center Moreland subscribers with directions for affixing them over the old number card on the center of the telephone dial. Landis said, "All-Number Calling has proved easier, faster and more accurate than other numbering systems."

Under the Direct Distant Dialing plan, the United States and Canada are divided into some 100 numbering plan areas, each identified by its own three-figure Area Code. Center Moreland telephones are in the 717 code. Customers calling long distance within this area will first dial the special direct distance code "1," then the desired long distance number.

Calls beyond the 717 Code Area will first require dialing the code 1, then the three figure code, and then the number. For example, to call Philadelphia, dial the special code 1, then area code 215, and then seven figures of Philadelphia party's number.

Center Moreland customers have all received a booklet giving complete instructions for making direct dialed distance calls.

'Red' Ambrose Improving

Retired Teacher, 62 Found Dead In Bed

Grace Johnson, 62, was found dead in bed in her first floor apartment in Shavertown, shortly before noon on Wednesday. Coroner's verdict was that she had died of a heart attack early Wednesday morning. A Tuesday night newspaper found on the steps led to investigation by her cousin Mrs. Chester Nesbitt, who had tried to reach her by telephone at 11 a.m.

Mrs. Nesbitt called Kingston Township police chief Herbert Updyke, who made entrance through the cellar. Four years ago Miss Johnson had been a cardiac patient at Geisinger, after retiring from teaching school in Courtland.

Miss Johnson, Shavertown resident since 1957, was born in Trucks-ville, daughter of the late Purcell and Rose Harris Johnson, and attended Trucksville Free Methodist Church, Harris Hill Road was named for her family.

She leaves a brother Chester, Dark Hollow; nieces and nephews, one of them Rev. Chester Harris, Montrose. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, following services conducted Saturday at 2 from the Bronson Funeral Home.
