Catholics Rejoice As Pope Paul VI Elected To Succeed Pope John XXIII

A new Supreme Pontiff has been elected by the College Of Cardinals, meeting in solemn conclave in the Sistine Chapel at the Vatican.
Giovanni Battista Cardinal Montini became Pope Paul VI, appearing before a congregation of the faithful assembled in the huge courtyard where short days earlier prayers for Pope John had been offered, and where the news of his death after the agonizing pain of his last illness had been announced at sunset.

Catholic churches of the Back Mountain, Gate of Heaven, Our Lady of Victory, St. Theresa's, Our Lady of Mt. Carmel, and St. Francis Cabrini, which had tolled the eighty-one strokes of Pope John's life when news of his passing was flashed over the wires, now rejoiced because a new Pope had been chosen to head 550 million Catholics throughout the world. Bells rang Friday morning when white smoke was reported from the Sistine Chapel, the sign that a new Pope had been elected.

The former Cardinal of Milan headed the list in a recent survey of Papal possibilities published by LIFE, his picture accorded a page to itself.

The world over, his elevation to the Papacy is considered a long step forward, for he is a man who is dedicated to progress, and committed to the program launched by Good Pope John. He is considered the Vatican's most practiced diplomat.

Widely travelled, and a student of international politics, Pope Paul has been closely associated with both Pope Pius and Pope John.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor James Clarke, chaplain at College Misericordia, now travelling in the Holy Land, is expected to be in Rome when the crowning of Pope Paul takes place on Sunday.
